JAPAN SEIZES CHINCHOW AS CHINESE FLEE

Honjo Now Is Master of All Manchuria With Army of 30,000.

DEFENDERS DO NOT OFFER RESISTANCE

Mukden, Manchuria, Saturday, Jan. 2 (U.P.).—Japanese troops entered the city of Chinchow at 6 a. m. today. The main body of the advancing Japanese encamped near the river last night, within striking distance of the city, and moved forward this morning at dawn.

Mukden, Manchuria, Jan. 1 (A.P.). Lieut. Gen. Shigeru Honjo, with an army of 30,000, tonight was the master of all Manchuria north of the Great Wall of China.

A squadron of cavalry, constituting an advance guard of the main force still camped at Kowpangtze, crossed the Taling River on the ice, entered the outskirts of Chinchow this afternoon and the capture of China's last stronghold was merely a matter of a few hours.

The Chinese have offered no resistance and the defending force continued pouring out of Chinchow all day toward the south. It appeared not unlikely that the Japanese would follow all the way down to Shanhaikwan, in the very shadow of the Great Wall.

Japanese Army Powerful.

Not since the World War has so efficient a body of troops been in the field. These short, stocky soldiers have machine guns, tanks and artillery. Airplanes are reconnoitering ahead of the advancing column. The men look like undersized Robinson Crusoes with the goatskin coats and hoods which they wear over the heavy olive drab uniform.

Maj. Gen. Miyake, Honjo's chief of staff, told the Associated Press tonight that the sole purpose of this campaign is the suppression of "all undesirable elements" in the area west of the Liao River, and that the advance will be carried forward until that purpose is achieved.

"We'll wipe out this bandit menace if we have to follow them to London or Paris," the general said, "and certainly we will go on to Shanhaikwan if the recalcitrant Chinese elements attempt to remain in Manchuria."

Honjo Slightly Ill.

All the high officers of the Japanese army except Gen. Honjo, who was slightly ill, made obeisance today before the monument erected to the memory of Japanese soldiers who died in the battle of Mukden during the Russo-Japanese war of 1905.

Japanese air scouts reported tonight that the Chinese evacuation of Chinchow continued throughout the past 48 hours as rapidly as the shortage of railway rolling stock permitted.

Chinese filled all possible trains running to the southwest toward Shanhaikwan and the protection of the great wall, while hundreds more fled to the northwestward along the branch railway from Shanhaikwan to

Lawrence Tibbett, Barytone, Marries

Mrs. J. M. Burgard Bride of Romantic Singer in Simple Rites.

New York, Jan. 1 (A.P.).—Lawrence Tibbett, the barytone whose romantic roles made him an opera and screen favorite, today in a simple ceremony married Mrs. [illegible]nie Marston Burgard, daughter of Edgar J. Marston, of New York and Los Angeles.

Surrounded by secrecy, the wedding took place in the Seventy-ninth street apartment of Mrs. Burgard's brother, Hunter S. Marston. The singer arrived at the apartment shortly after 5 p. m. but it was not until nearly two hours later that a member of the household announced the ceremony had been completed. It was understood the marriage was performed by a New York Supreme Court justice.

Only a few close friends and members of the family were present. The bride was unattended. It was Tibbett's second marriage. His first was dissolved by divorce at Reno recently. He has young twin sons. The bride had been married twice before.

Soviet Staff in London Investigated by Stalin

London, Jan. 2 (Saturday) (A.P.). The Daily Mail said today that Joseph Stalin, leader of Soviet Russia, was distrustful of the Soviet diplomatic and commercial staffs in London and that a special commission was on the way to overhaul the Soviet organization here.

The suspicions were based, the newspaper said, on reports of the Russian secret police that Soviet departments in both London and Paris were strongholds of "dangerous opportunists" fortified by contact with "bourgeois elements." Even Ambassador G. I. Sokolnikov in London and Valerian Dovgalevsky in Paris had been denounced as suspects, the Mail said.

NEW YEAR MISHAPS CLAIM LIVES OF 120

(Associated Press.)

Heavy holiday traffic tallied 100 victims and accidents associated with the Nation's New Year's Day observance accounted for a score more of lives.

Highways of nearly every State and skyways of the Midwest alike were charged with fatalities in the rising list of dead last night. Burns, falls, a freak cave-in, hunting, and even a coasting accident swelled the totals.

The Midwest appeared to be the heaviest sufferer in traffic tragedies. In Illinois nine persons, six of them children, drowned after their motor car fell 22 feet into the Calumet River while they were en route to a holiday celebration.

An airplane mishap brought death to four passengers at Springfield, Ohio. At Waterloo, in the same State, three men lost their lives when a cave, where a party was being held, collapsed.

Michigan counted ten dead, seven in the Detroit metropolitan area alone, as a consequence of traffic accidents which injured more than 100 persons.

In the Midwest two died of accidental falls while celebrating, and one of injuries in a fist fight. Two were injured by stray bullets.

A small boy was killed while coasting at Salt Lake City, and Fort Worth, Tex., reported the shooting of a Mexican mother of four children by a drink-crazed man.

More than a dozen auto deaths were recorded in the South, five in Georgia alone. Holiday dispatches from that area also brought belated news of a tornado in Alabama that killed two Negroes.

Rain-swept traffic arteries discouraged New Year's Day driving in the East and held auto deaths there to less than a score.

Two Trainmen Injured As 14 Cars Jump Track

Bolivar, Pa., Jan. 1 (A.P.).—Two trainmen were injured early today when the locomotive and fourteen cars of an 84-car eastbound Pennsylvania Railroad freight train were derailed a quarter mile from the Bolivar passenger station.

Henry Lees, 42, the fireman, was scalded. William Southworth, 42, the conductor, suffered body bruises. Their condition is not serious.

Wreckage and coal were strewn for 200 yards along the right-of-way, blocking three of the four main-line tracks. Passenger traffic moved undelayed over the one open artery. The cause of the wreck is unknown.

BANKERS ADMIT VAST PROFITS ON FOREIGN BONDS

American Houses Gained Hundreds of Millions, Senate Evidence.

SOUTH AMERICAN LIST SHOWS BIG DEFAULTS

(Associated Press.)

Evidence indicating American banking houses have profited hundreds of millions of dollars from the flotation of foreign securities in this country since the war was made public yesterday by the Senate finance committee.

The evidence was based on statistics filed by J. P. Morgan & Co., the National City Bank, and Kuhn, Loeb & Co. in the committee's recent investigation.

Senator Johnson (Republican), California, called for the study to determine whether American bankers were interested in cancellation of foreign war debts to protect private loans.

The committee made public a table showing that $815,467,000 in foreign bonds, all South American, have gone into default within the past year. Statements showing present holdings of the companies in foreign short-term securities were withheld.

Morgan Profits Not Told.

The figures showed the National City Co., a subsidiary of the National City Bank, cleared $29,020,604 by participating in the sale of $5,625,912,000 of foreign bonds, and the Kuhn, Loeb & Co. made a gross profit of $4,224,395 from its share in the sale of $1,186,180,000.

The Morgan company has sold $1,807,578,000 of foreign securities, but made no report on its profits.

The mass of statistics disclosed also that banks all over the country which participated in selling the bonds made large aggregate profits. Statistics on this phase of the situation were not complete, but the National City's figures showed that the total profits for all banks concerned on issues it originat[illegible] amounting to $1,071,955,000, were $37,560,343.

Altogether this company participated in selling $5,625,912,000 in securities. If the same rate of profit was made on the entire amount, then American banks profited by about $200,000,000.

Originated by Trio.

Many of the figures filed by the three companies overlapped, because they participated jointly in some of the issues. But the three houses originated a total of $3,955,538,000 of securities in addition to those in which they acted jointly.

The National City Co. originated $498,255,000 of Cuban and Canadian issues at a net profit of $3,487,206 and $1,071,955,000 of other foreign securities at a profit of $13,392,502. It participated in the sale of $795,295,000 of additional Canadian and Cuban issues at a profit of $777,394 and of $3,260,407,000 other foreign securities at a profit of $11,363,501.

Kuhn, Loeb & Co. managed issues totaling $577,750,000, with a gross profit of $3,106,811, and participated in others amounting to $580,430,000 at a gross gain of $1,117,584.

South American Defaults.

The table of defaults showed that Brazilian bonds, federal, state and municipal, to the amount of $363,147,800, had been defaulted. The amounts for other South American countries were: Chile, $283,016,500; Peru, $97,286,000; Bolivia, $61,103,500; Colombia, $11,230,000, and Uruguay, $5,684,000.

The committee will resume its investigation Monday with Otto Kahn, of Kuhn, Loeb & Co., again on the stand. He will be followed by Clarence Dillon, of Dillon, Read & Co., and W. W. Aldrich, president of the Chase National Bank.

3,060 Wish Happy New Year To Hoovers at White House

Inclement Weather Reduces Number of Persons Who Annually Pay Respects to President and First Lady; Four Accept Breakfast Invitation.

A hearty handclasp and a "Happy New Year" from the President was the reward of 3,060 persons who attended the White House reception yesterday.

An almost continuous downpour saved the Hoovers many a handshake, as only half as many came as did last year.

But the cold damp rain did not dampen the warmth of the President's and Mrs. Hoover's greeting.

To all, the epauleted diplomat, the uniformed soldier, the unpretentious citizen, went the same timeworn and traditional handshake, begun 131 years ago by John Adams.

Just at 11 o'clock, when the scarlet-clad Marine Band with fanfare of trumpets broke into "Hail to the Chief" the President with Mrs. Hoover walked downstairs to the Blue Room, followed by cabinet members, with their wives.

As the President's two grandchildren, Peggy and Peter Hoover, peeked at the impressive ceremony from behind heavy palms, he greeted resplendently uniformed Ambassador De Martino of Italy, dean of the diplomats, with the first handshake.

After the Italian representative, followed the other diplomats, Chief Justice Hughes and his fellows, congressional leaders, Army and Navy officials, seven congressional medal of honor men, two of whom were negroes, and almost a thousand others.

Nearly 2,000 others followed at the public reception in the afternoon, each receiving a cordial greeting from the Chief Executive and his wife, who wore a sweeping brown dress with a short brown jacket.

But other incidents came earlier. Just after midnight two Government clerks took up a vigil at the White House gate. They wished to be first in line. Before day broke two others joined them.

To their surprise and delight, all four were asked in to breakfast by the President, who had arisen early for his game with the "medicine ball cabinet."

They were William L. Wilson, of 305

By BRIAN BELL.

Rose Bowl, Pasadena, Calif., Jan. 1 (A.P.).—A great football player who has been doing good turns for others for three years, flashed briefly today as a ball carrier and enabled Southern California to win the mythical National championship by defeating Tulane 21 to 12 as 83,000 pop-eyed spectators looked on in the annual Tournament of Roses game.

Erny Pinckert has been a brilliant, blocking back throughout his college career, good enough for the last two years to rate all-American, but he has had a minimum of opportunity to carry the ball. He has spent his football life out in front of somebody else, but today he scored two touchdowns and the Trojans needed them both to stop a fighting but luckless greengarbed team from Tulane University.

The game marked Southern California's third victory in Rose Bowl competition, a distinction not shared by any other team. It was Tulane's firs[illegible] appearance, and the boys from New Orleans had no apologies to take back to their bayous. The game was so close and so hard-fought that a break, half a dozen times, might have meant the difference between victory and defeat.

Southern California, perhaps, made the breaks, for its big, strong team never underestimated the strength of the lighter but faster visitors. Tulane outgained Southern California, registering 18 first downs to 11 for the victors, and the Green Backs gained 378 yards to 238 for the Trojans.

The game was won in the third period when Pinckert did his stuff. The big half back dashed over to the first score from the 28 yard line, using his reverse, the only offensive play he has. So seldom has Erny carried the ball he has only one play in his list of assignments. The ball had been placed in scoring position by Gaius Shaver with two clever side stepping drives.

Just a few minutes later Pinckert personally made full arrangements for an encore for his side and a second personal triumph by recovering a Tulane fumble on the visitors' 28 yard line. Two smashes into the line moved the ball up five yards and Pinckert then dusted off his reverse and ran over the goal line again, for the second time scoring standing up without the menace of an enemy hand touching his person.

The forward pass, an offensive weapon in which Tulane was ex-

U. S. CRAFT WILL AID AIR LINE TO EUROPE

Postoffice and Pan-American to Join British Fliers in Oversea Plan.

Miami, Fla., Dec. 1 (U.P.).—Pan-American Airways and the United States Postoffice Department are collaborating in plans for establishing an American mainland to Azores Transatlantic Airline, J. A. Thomas, assistant general traffic manager for the Airlines Co., said tonight.

Thomas' statement was in connection with dispatches from Paris that Imperial Airways of Great Britain was contemplating a Europe-Bermuda passenger service.

"Pan-American Airways has been experimenting for the past fourteen months with large seaplanes over large water expanses with the idea of a transatlantic line," Thomas said.

"Announcements may be made at any time now by the Postoffice Department. The Pan-American home port will be Atlantic City, or some other seaport with a minimum of fog."

He confirmed the report that Pan-American and British Imperial Airways will join lines at Bermuda or the Azores, probably the latter.

Paris, Jan. 1 (U.P.).—A fleet of six giant seaplanes, equipped with Rolls-Royce motors, will roar out over the Atlantic early this year to inaugurate the first Europe-Bahama passenger service, it was announced today.

The British air line, Imperial Airways, made public its plan to join with the Pan-American Airways in the venture, but it has not yet been determined whether the Pan-American ships will link with the British at the Azores, or whether the British machines will be used on the Azores-Bermuda stage.

The new air line will enable business men to make the trip from Europe to New York, by way of Bermuda, in four days. The trip must be regularly completed in that time or fail to meet the swift competition of express ocean liners.

With their base on this side of the Atlantic at Southampton, the seaplanes will fly down the French coast, then skirt northern Spain to Lisbon, Portugal. This will be the first leg. After an overnight stay in the harbor, the large planes will make the 750-mile jump to the Azores the following day. Then will come the most perilous flight—1,500 miles of open water to Bermuda.

The operation of a service via the Azores by any other than a French company was impossible until recently, owing to the claim by the French Aeropostale Co. of exclusive landing rights in the islands. It is presumed this obstacle has now been removed, enabling the British and American companies to cooperate in what will be the most spectacular airplane development of 1932.

1,000,000 Watch Festival of Roses

Pasadena, Calif., Jan. 1 (A.P.).—A symphony in blossoms with blooms for the words and the steady cheering of 1,000,000 persons for music trailed through Pasadena today in the annual Tournament of Roses.

In winning the grand sweepstakes the City of San Mari[illegible], whose floral float was dedicated to Australia, supplanted the City of Glendale, almost habitual winner of the parade. Glendale was placed first in the theme division.

The parade was a prelude to the football game between Tulane University and the University of Southern California at the Rose Bowl. Clear skies and a bright sun enhanced the spectacle.

GANDHI, SET FOR JAIL, REPEATS DEFIANCE

Mahatma Packs Up for Cell as His Boycott Plans Are Prepared.

Bombay, India, Jan. 1 (A.P.).—Mahatma Gandhi tonight issued one more warning to his people to be ready to resume the civil disobedience campaign, and packed up his collection of loin cloths and spinning wheels in preparation for another term in jail.

The Congress party working committee meanwhile addressed an appeal to merchants to abandon their trade in foreign cloth and cooperate with the congress, at the same time asking all Indians to make only the very minimum use of government railroads, postoffices and other bureaus.

The Mahatma issued a statement of his own "on the eve of the new ordeal to which India has been summoned," inviting all free peoples to study the progress of the civil disobedience campaign as a possible effective moral equivalent for war." His impending imprisonment or deportation—the viceroy made it clear yesterday that the government will deal harshly with leaders of any subversive movement—failed to disturb the little man's poise.

"If I go to jail it will be a satisfaction to know that I am getting free board from the state," he said. "I am used to prison and I go there again it will be a marvelous opportunity for quiet reflection, meditation, spinning and reading."

India's business men, however, were apprehensive about the consequences of a new boycott which might ruin the country's trade, and still hoped for a compromise.

Among the things Gandhi packed today were his Bible, Ramsay MacDonald's "Wanderings and Excursions" and Sir Samuel Hoare's "The Fourth Seal." The two British statesmen gave him copies of their books while he was in London.

Leaders of the provincial congress committee, also expecting arrest, removed all party documents and the headquarters furniture to a place of safety.

They said a number of wealthy Indian merchants including two who attended the round table conference, had pledged their support to a boycott of British goods.

3 Wounded as Police Quell Spanish Rioters

San Sebastian, Spain, Jan. 1 (A.P.). Three men were badly wounded and a number of others were less seriously hurt in a riot here today.

Police charged a mob which attempted to parade to the military headquarters and demand the release of several soldiers who face court-martial proceedings in connection with a recent disturbance among the men of the garrison.

Lost Flier's Body Is Reported Found

Elkins, W. Va., Jan. 1 (A.P.).—Persistent but unsubstantiated reports that the body of Lieut. E. H. Bobbitt, missing Army pilot, had been found, came from the mountains of southern West Virginia tonight.

Airmen, State troopers and officials of a dozen towns, searching for the young aviator, made feverish efforts to locate the source of the stories. Automobiles and motorcycles were pressed into service to trace a report from a remote section of Randolph County, that the pilot and his wrecked plane were discovered in the hills nine miles from the nearest village.

Dispatches reaching Elkins from Washington said no report on Bobbitt had been received at Bolling Field,

BOMB ARRESTS EXPECTED SOON IN GREAT PLOT

12 SUSPECTS SOUGHT IN EASTON TRAGEDY

Hotel Clerk Identifies Pictures; Other Outrages Are Reported.

New York, Jan. 1 (U.P.).—Police have a complete description of the three men who sent six packages loaded with death-dealing explosives to prominent Fascist sympathizers, in the most startling terrorist plot ever disclosed in the United States.

John Timon, agent for the American Railway Express, today described the men who planted the diabolical engines of destruction with his service for delivery in the Middle West.

With this clew, and others gathered by a host of Federal, city and State detectives, Lieut. Charles Newman, head of the New York bomb squad, who has charge of the city's investigation, was reported hopeful of capturing the nihilists within the next few days.

The plot unquestionably was the work of professionals according to police. The nicety with which the bombs were constructed, and the ingeniously contrived mechanism to set them off, indicated that they were made by men of experience.

On Trail of Suspects.

The Postoffice Department's investigation at Easton, Pa., where the first six bombs were mailed, developed rapidly today, and Postoffice inspectors now have a dozen names of suspects who will be rounded up for questioning.

It was developed positively today that three men of foreign appearance appeared in Easton Tuesday night, remaining over night at the Postoffice Hotel, directly opposite the Federal Building. They checked out at 8 a. m., Wednesday, and 15 minutes later the deadly packages were pushed through the window of the parcel post department.

Harry Brader, night clerk at the hotel, who remembers the men perfectly, went through 200 rogues gallery pictures at police headquarters today, and picked out twelve pictures resembling the men who registered with him the night before the first bomb tragedy.

Further Identification Made.

Further identification was afforded by two other witnesses, the Rev. P. T. Stengele and Chester Vollmer, who were in the Easton postoffice when the men deposited their packages at the window. They, too, agreed on the twelve pictures chosen by Brader as resembling the plotters.

Inspection of the packages produced one set of fingerprints which were rushed to New York for further investigation.

Chief Postoffice Inspector Harry Getchell today made a mysterious trip from Easton to Philadelphia on a secret mission. He will return tomorrow, to attend the funerals of John House and Edward Werkheiser, postal clerks whose lives were sacrificed in the first bomb explosion.

State troopers and heavy police squads will be on guard at the funerals.

It was understood the postoffice service has asked for a general roundup of all notorious anti-Fascists and Communists in Philadelphia and New York, and the three Eastern witnesses will be taken to those cities in an attempt to identify the three who are wanted.

(Associated Press.)

Chicago police definitely established Friday that the package addressed to Giuseppi Castruccio, Italian consul in

U. of V. Professor Wins National Science Award

American Association Holds Findings of Dr. Speidel on Nerve Growth Are Outstanding Discovery and Votes Him $1,000 Prize for 1931.

New Orleans, Jan. 1 (A.P.).—The annual $1,000 prize for an outstanding discovery was awarded tonight by the American Association for the Advancement of Science to Dr. Carl Caskey Speidel, of the University of Virginia.

He is the first scientist to make a nerve grow so that all its secrets are visible from its "birth" to maturity.

Dr. Speidel cleared up the doubt about how a nerve grows. Some scientists had held that it developed "like a chain," others that it grew from a single tiny cell. But no one had been able actually to see.

This tiny "cell" is shaped like a cone and travels along spinning a tenuous thread behind it like a spider.

Amazingly enough, like an intelligent bug, this cone-shaped thing knows just where to go. It moves without legs by "hunching" itself along. When it comes to an obstruction in the tadpole's tail it hesitates, explores about and finds a good pathway to go around the obstacle.

The first "cone" is a pioneer. After it come others, each following the first laid track, and spinning their tiny threads around the first nerve fiber. They thus build up a full sized nerve.

After the threads are spun together, a second seemingly intelligent type of living cell comes along, the myelin sheath cells which form the nerve covering. These possess the power of motion. If any part of the new nerve is hurt they rush to that point to make repairs.

These nerve elements also show evidence of intelligence when new flesh begins growing near them. They seem to know there is a new area needing nerves and speed up their progress in that direction.

Dr. Speidel's microscope may dispose of a long held theory that nerves are guided by some electrical attrac-

50,000 Stand In Line to Get New Stamps

First sale of the special issue of George Washington bicentennial stamps yesterday brought out 50,000 persons to stand in line for cancellations and gave the Washington postoffice its greatest single day's business in history. After a hasty check last night, Postmaster William M. Mooney found the office had sold more than $100,000 worth of stamps and had more than 1,000,000 cancellations.

The stamps, which commemorate the bicentennial of Washington's birth, went on sale in Washington a day ahead of other cities, and this fact drew philatelists to the Capital from all parts of the country.

Some even took rooms at nearby hotels in order to be on hand when the windows went up at 7:30 o'clock yesterday morning. When night fell,

TWO NAVY BUILDING PROGRAMS DUE SOON

General Board's Proposals Will Be Used in Support of Vinson Bills.

(Associated Press)

The Navy General Board is preparing two building programs—one of ten years and the other of fifteen—as a pattern for Congressional leaders advocating a bigger Navy.

The programs were sought by Chairman Vinson of the House naval affairs committee, and include a year-by-year construction plan to bring the American sea force up to London treaty strength.

In his request, Vinson suggested the Navy specify which ships should be built during each year so the most urgent needs could be filled first in legislation he will introduce.

The Navy General Board has had the programs under study this week and hopes to lay them before the House Committee soon after Congress reconvenes next week.

As a result of the interest of Congressional leaders in new building, the Department was represented as being optimistic over the situation, though the determination to curtail expenditures may prevent actual appropriations of construction money.

Vinson has stated his desire "to formulate and support a program which, when appropriations therefor are approved by Congress, will give to the Nation within a reasonable number of years, a Navy of full strength which the defense of the country requires in according with the London treaty."

Generally, Vinson's position has found support in Chairman Hale of the Senate Naval Affairs Committee, and Representative Britten, ranking minority member of the House group.

It was explained at the Navy that if a ten or fifteen year construction plan is adopted, the number of ships and tonnage to be built under the London treaty would be increased as compared to a five-year full treaty program because more replacements would be allowed over the longer period.

Navy officials do not favor building up to full strength before the London treaty expires in 1936, but do seek that an "orderly" program be begun immediately which would round out all classes over a longer period of time.

Jury Reports Deadlock In Oil Swindle Trial

Oklahoma City, Jan. 1 (A.P.).—The Federal jury considering the case of eight defendants in the Universal Oil & Gas Co. mail fraud trial had not reached a verdict tonight.

After a day of deliberation, the jurors sent word they had not reached an agreement. Judge Edgar S. Vaught said he would be on hand in the morning to receive the jurors' decision, if it is then available.

Seymour E. Jacobson Cox, who once went to Federal prison with Dr Frederick A. Cook, the explorer, in a similar case, is regarded as the chief defendant. His wife also was tried.

'POLICY CHART' TO GUIDE U. S. ARMS ENVOYS

HOPE TO HARMONIZE CONFLICTING VIEWS

(Associated Press.)

America's delegation to the general disarmament conference will enter the parley with an outward silence, but its brief cases will hold a ready answer to every question of policy or technical detail.

Ambassador Charles G. Dawes, chairman of the delegation, and his colleagues will even carry with them to Geneva ideas designed to fit together the conflicting views among nations on how disarmament can best be accomplished.

Secretary Stimson had before him yesterday the draft of a policy chart to guide the delegation through the difficult problems to come before the conference. The suggestions were drafted by disarmament experts of the State Department.

Work was begun on them after Hugh R. Wilson, Minister to Switzerland, and alternate delegate to the conference, discussed the whole problem with President Hoover a few weeks ago.

Will Go Over Details.

The Secretary will go over them with Ambassador Dawes when he arrives next week and they will have to be finally approved by President Hoover in their major points.

In brief, the proposed policy would include opposition to a discussion of recent suggestions in Europe that the parley reduce the size of capital ships, limited in the Washington Treaty to 35,000 tons.

It would include a combination of direct and budgetary limitations as the method of reducing land forces.

America has always been an exponent of direct limitation, under which a nation is allowed a specific number of ships, guns, men or shells. Under budgetary limitation a nation's expenditures on national defense are compared with the expenditures of another, usually its nearest competitor in armaments.

Naval Example Is Used.

Officials were not clear in detail as to how the combination direct-budgetary method could be fitted to land armament limitation, but used a naval example of how it would apply.

Under direct limitation a certain nation would be allowed a specified number of battleships or 10,000-ton cruisers as in the Washington or London treaties. With budgetary limitation also employed, the nation would be limited within a certain sum of money for each ship, thus preventing the building of the so-called superships through installation of special equipment and devices.

The suggestions of policy so far before the secretary are silent for the most part on air limitation. One suggestion has been that fighting planes be limited as a category of fighting material along with heavy artillery, light artillery, tanks and other war machines.

U. S. Aerial Defense Assailed.

A rude awakening for America from "a fool's paradise" unless aerial defense is improved was predicted yesterday by Maj. Gen. James E. Fechet as he retired as chief of the Army Air Corps.

His warning came after four years at the head of the Army's air forces and 33 in the service. He said he intended to attempt to arouse the Nation to aerial needs by laying bare "plain facts."

He explained:

"I've finished my job as chief of the Air Corps and have come to the end of my military career. I now see a great opportunity to do more for national defense and aviation as a whole in my new work."

He became yesterday the chief of the Washington bureau of one of the leading aeronautical publications and will head its national defense department. His retirement as chief of the Air Corps was mandatory after completing the four-year tour of duty in Europe is opening its eyes to the sun of political reality after thirteen years in the darkness of postwar hatred, according to authoritative opinion here.

(United Press.)

Between the lines of reports from Europe regarding the proposed reparations conference at Lausanne, Switzerland, probably January 18, experts who have been studying the debt-reparations problem here see strong indications that the powers which wrote the Versailles Treaty are ready to take real action toward aiding Germany.

If they do, it will mean a start on the rewriting of the treaty itself, which has been shadowing Europe since the war.

One reason for the hope experts here have that European powers are ready to grant Germany further extension of her reparations moratorium is that they believe it impossible now for these nations not to know that aid is essential.

Peril Seen in Germany.

Predictions of the most disastrous consequences are made if the powers fail to grant Germany real relief. They say in any event Germany can not pay, and loog apprehensively beyond the actual financial situation into the internal political situation of the country, which they have regarded for months as dangerous.

No one believes the Lausanne conference, even if it results in real action, will go smoothly. Each conference of the sort, they point out, has its crisis. Some crises reach the headlines of the newspapers; others are liquidated in secrecy.

Often, as in the case of the Young reparations plan and other international agreements, the crises necessitates ambiguous writing of disputed clauses. That is so that each nation, if an argument occurs later, may put a different intepretation on the disputed point.

Believing some action toward relief of Germany is necessary, experts here say one indication whether the continental powers are really awake at last will be whether there are ambiguous clauses.

Another point of interest, in event of an agreement to extend Germany's moratorium, is whether there will be an attempt to hinge the powers' enforced generosity on the hope of American generosity regarding war debts owed by allied nations.

Foreign Defaults Feared.

It is considered inevitable that whatever agreement may be reached will intimate that American concessions would be desirable. The question is whether there will be a statement that American concessions are essential to any allied relief for Germany. Administration circles here, mindful of the antagonism of Congress to the present moratorium, hope not.

But the administration is convinced if Congress will not consent to further debt postponement, some nations will default their payments, not only those small payments which may be postponed under the debt funding agreements, but the substantial interest payments as well, which are not postponable.

Crazed Man Held In Doumer Scare

Paris, Jan. 1 (U.P.).—A deranged man attempted to stop the automobile in which President Paul Doumer was riding to the Elysee Palace today, but was seized by the police and held for observation.

The presidential round of visits was concluding when the man rushed to the automobile brandishing a half-open newspaper and shouting. He was found to be unarmed.

It was a busy day for the president and, in fact, the whole population. Paris went about its traditional custom of calling on friends and acquaintances. Principal interest centered in the diplomatic and official receptions of the president.

Restaurant owners estimated the midnight crowds were perhaps one-fifth smaller than in previous years, and that the consumption of champagne was cut nearly 50 per cent. New Year's celebrations in Paris have never returned to their prewar gayety, and each year sees a diminution in high spirits.

First Day of New Year Gets Lost in Shuffle

By JOHN J. DALY

ALREADY, the participants in the March of Progress have called for "Time Out."

With the game just begun, the New Year on its way, the first day got lost in the shuffle; but that was expected. From time immemorial it has been so, being as it were "the morning after the night before."

In leap year, however, there still remains a full year of 365 days in which to accomplish all the great resolutions resolved at the beginning of the New Year. So, in reality, not a day has been lost.

This is well, since there is a lot of time needed to do the things that must be done, remembering always that Rome was not built in a day.

* * * *

THE very air is charged with the new impetus of humanity—bound to get somewhere. It augurs well for the future, following the observation of old man Plato in the tenth book of the "Republic," where it is set down that the soul is shaped by the State in which it dwells. Man is a product of environment.

These things being true, with souls charged with the desire and ambition to do mighty deeds in the 365 remaining days, only the dullards and the ne'er-do-wells will be in relatively the same position a year from now that they occupy today.

The game is on, and the last day out for time has been counted.

It is reasonable to expect that men must stop awhile, to catch their breath, after the first exhilaration of getting started; though, in fact, they have not really started.

* * * *

AFTER this, however, what the athletes call "second wind" comes into play. Then, the gods have mercy on those who get in the way of the advancing machine; for all the world seems to have girded its loins in a determination to let the dead past bury its dead and to welcome the fruits of the future.

This throb of life pulsates through every person of whatever age—the young, who find themselves getting older; the old who, flushed with new youth, grow younger.

Plato saw Athens decay, and he recorded the causes and effects of the catastrophe. Were some such omniscience now present he would, with his stylus, write down the record of undercurrents about to carry America on to a new goal—all the souls in all the States surcharged with a vital dynamic force propelling the Nation on to a newer and greater height.

MANY CASES FACED BY SUPREME COURT

(Associated Press.)

The Supreme Court will begin its new year with arguments next week on a variety of hard-fought cases of potential far-reaching importance.

Among the ten which will face the court when it reconvenes Monday after a Christmas recess are disputes involving the Government's plan for Mississippi flood control, the right of Negroes to vote in party primaries and the Government's authority to punish citizens for refusing to return from abroad to testify.

Secretary Hurley believes the effectiveness of flood control plans depends in large measure on the Supreme Court reversing a decision of the lower courts that the United States must obtain flowage rights over property which will be overflowed by spillways or acquire the land by condemnation before building levees.

Solicitor General Thacher, who will argue for the Government, contends it would cost the Government hundreds of millions of dollars to obtain flowage rights over approximately 4,000,000 acres within two floodways in Louisiana.

The case involving the right of Negroes to vote was brought by L. A. Nixon, an El Paso Negro, against Democratic election officials there. He contended they refused to permit him to vote in a Democratic primary.

The Supreme Court in 1927 held invalid a Texas law prohibiting Negroes from voting at Democratic primaries and the present law was enacted as a substitute. Under it political parties are authorized to prescribe the qualifications of their members.

The Democratic State executive committee issued orders under the new law prohibiting Negroes from voting in its primaries. When Nixon was prevented on July 28, 1928, from voting, he brought suit against two judges of elections for $5,000 damages, claiming he was being denied constitutional rights.

In the third case, Harry M. Blackmer, Colorado oil operator, is asking the court to set aside fines of $60,000 imposed in two cases for failure to return from Paris to testify in the Sinclair-Fall oil trials.

New Head Chosen At Boston College

Father Gallagher, Former Georgetown Dean, Is Appointed.

Boston, Jan. 1 (A.P.).—The Rev. Louis J. Gallagher, provincial socius and prefect general of studies, has been appointed president of Boston College to succeed the Rev. James H. Dolan, it was announced today. Father Dolan goes to Georgetown University at Washington on leave of absence.

Father Gallagher is 46 years old and a native of Boston. He entered the Society of Jesus in 1905 from the sophomore class of Boston College and was ordained to the priesthood in 1920 by the late Cardinal Gibbons.

While principal of Xavier High School in New York City in 1922 Father Gallagher was appointed to the Vatican Relief Mission during the famine in Russia. After his return to America, he became dean at Georgetown, and, in 1926, was appointed socius to the provincial.

(Associated Press.)

The National Woman's Christian Temperance Union wrote members of Congress yesterday it was opposed to submitting the prohibition amendment to a vote.

The circular letter was signed by Mrs. Ella A. Boole, president. It said in part:

"The W. C. T. U., you have been told by the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, has changed its position on the subject of submitting prohibition to a vote. The W. C. T. U. has not changed its position with relation to the liquor traffic.

"Resubmission is the strategy indorsed by the brewers, the foreign wine interests and supported by the sinister activities of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment. It is a vastly different thing to submit to the people a constructive measure for bettering conditions than to submit a subversive idea fraught with selective anarchy

"For that reason we oppose resubmission. In its place we ask for better enforcement and larger observance. We oppose resubmission * * * because it is a move to restore the liquor traffic.

"We are organized in every State and in nearly every congressional district. Every member of Congress knows we are committed to law observance."

Davis May Support Direct Relief Plan

(Associated Press).

If the Senate Western Progressives' bill for direct Federal unemployment relief comes to a vote in Congress it may find support from a former member of President Hoover's Cabinet.

James J. Davis, who left the Secretaryship of Labor to become junior Senator from Pennsylvania, says he is sympathetic to Federal relief, if it is shown to be necessary to prevent distress this winter. He let it be known yesterday he does not consider the provisions of the LaFollette and Costigan measures as constituting a "dole." One provides for distribution of $200,000,000 and the other $350,000,000 to existing welfare agencies. Davis takes the position the vote of Congress would be on a temporary proposition to meet an emergency.

However, a split by Davis with the administration is not to his liking, and the administration is opposed to direct relief.

Encyclopedia Writer Succumbs to Injuries

New York, Jan. 1 (A.P.).—Walter Talmadge Arndt, former legislative correspondent of the New York Evening Post and contributor to encyclopedias, died today in Trenton, N. J., of injuries received in an automobile accident Christmas Eve. He was 58.

Born in Depere, Wis., Mr. Arndt was graduated from the University of Wisconsin in 1895. He had served as assistant editor of the International Year Book and was on the editorial staff of the New International Encyclopedia from 1902 to 1904, contributing more than 1,000 articles on American history and biography to the encyclopedia.

American's Plea for Life Rejected by Irish Court

Belfast, Northern Ireland, Jan. 1 (A.P.).—The Ulster Court of Criminal Appeal today rejected an application by Eddie Cullens, naturalized American citizen, to set aside the sentence of death recently imposed upon him for the murder of Achmet Musa, a Turk.

Application will be made to take the case before the House of Lords. This would mean a long postponement of the hanging and requires the consent of the attorney general.

Stunt Flier, 20, Dies in Crash.

Waco, Tex., Jan. 1 (U.P.).—Robert Gunn, 20, stunt flier from Liberal, Kans., was killed today in a New Year aerial circus exhibition. His plane turned upside down in a power dive and crashed from an altitude of 1,000 feet.

DEMOCRATS WARNED ON RELIEF PROGRAM

Schneider, Progressive, Says They May Lose His Group if Aid Is Denied.

(Associated Press.)

Conscious of the keen scrutiny of those of varying political faiths, the Democrats are rehearsing for the prelude to their presidential campaign drama of 1932.

On January 9, they will get the campaign officially under way by choosing from among several contestants the city and the time for their nominating convention. San Francisco, Chicago and Atlantic City are among the cities most favorably spoken of for the convention.

The meeting here at which they will make the choice will be on the day following the Jackson Day dinner which has come to be an occasion for an outpouring of Democratic oratory in inspirational addresses.

This year, however, an effort has been evidenced to curtail to a degree the volume of speech-making. The program calls for addresses by three past Democratic presidential candidates—James M. Cox, John W. Davis and Alfred E. Smith. In past years there have been from ten to a score of speakers.

Roosevelt Appears Leading.

There will be a lull after the selection of the convention city, during which the different Democratic aspirants to the White House put forth their varying claims. Of these, Franklin D. Roosevelt appears to have an edge at present over Newton D. Baker, Gov. Albert C. Ritchie of Maryland and the numerous others who have been spoken of as possibilities.

The Democrats sent a hopeful glance toward the Republican independents as they prepared for the assemblage. There has been talk of a third party and more talk that Franklin D. Roosevelt might be acceptable to some of the independants.

From one of the House independents—Schneider, of Wisconsin, who received several votes recently for the Speakership — there came yesterday something in the nature of an answer to the question in the eyes of the Democrats: Mr. Schneider said:

"If the Democrats, now in control of the House, can give no conclusive evidence that they stand for those in distress and have a program by which that distress can not only be relieved now, but that will insure against a recurrence of it in the future, they will not conceal their failure by naming as a standard bearer a man who is reputed to be progressive.

Failure May Cost Votes.

"Deeds will speak infinitely louder than words, particularly where the very ones who will win by a Democratic victory are the ones who are now responsible for passing, so far as the House is concerned, a constructive, intelligent and progressive program. If they fail they are likely to forfeit any claim they might otherwise have on progressive votes."

The Wisconsin member said that it was becoming "more unmistakable" that the Republicans could not win with President Hoover as their candidate, but that the nomination of a "liberal Republican on a constructive program may mean a Republican victory."

But from Representative Byrns, of Tennessee, the chairman of the Democratic national congressional committee, there came the opinion that with the series of victories behind them that they gained in 1931 the Democrats "may look forward with confidence to the presidential election of next November."

He enumerated among these the outcome of elections in Missouri, Ohio, New York, Texas, Michigan, New Jersey and Kentucky.

Roosevelt Calls State Relief Fund Inadequate

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 1 (U.P.).—The State of New York was called upon today by Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt not to cease aiding the unemployment because $20,000,000 has been appropriated for emergency relief.

Estimating New York's unemployment at 1,500,000, the governor said the State's appropriation was inadequate to care for those justified in expecting aid.

Joyce Kilmer's Mother Dies.

House Employes Draw Pay as Old Year Ends

(Associated Press.)

Pay checks failed to say "Merry Christmas" this winter to employes of the House of Representatives, but they did say "Happy New Year."

The 1,450 on the House pay roll—including secretaries of representatives—got pay checks dated December 31.

A time-honored custom provided a pre-Christmas pay off, but the Democratic control changed that. The pay roll was undergoing such swift revision, with new names going on and old names coming off, that it took until New Year's to do all the figuring.

12 CENTRAL BANKS TO BE REORGANIZED

Special to The Washington Post.

Frederick, Md., Jan. 1.—Following a meeting of nearly 1,000 depositors, representing approximately $4,500,000, plans were started today to reorganize the Central Trust Co. and its eleven branch banks in Frederick, Carroll, Washington and Howard counties, which closed their doors September 3.

The reorganization plan, prepared by corporation attorneys of Baltimore, provides for an appraisal of the assets of the company by a committee of depositors and transferring the assets regarded as good together with those classed as bad and doubtful to a holding company to be formed. The latter corporation will transfer the good assets to a new banking company to be formed, and will hold the bad or doubtful ones for an improved market. To further carry out the plan, $500,000 must be raised from the sale of stock of which $375,000 will constitute the capital stock and $125,000 the surplus.

A committee of 21 persons, representing the largest depositors of the closed banks, including J. A. Eason, Washington, and John McGill, secretary-treasurer of the Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers Association with headquarters in Washington, was appointed to start the reorganization.

The present liquidation will be taken out of the hands of George W. Page, receiver and State bank commissioner, who has been in charge since the bank closed. It is claimed that reorganization will benefit the 26,000 depositors, who have deposits aggregating $13,000,000. Mr. Eason, the Washington representative on the committee, represents deposits of about $300,000.

Road Moratorium Sought in Virginia

Delegates Member Says State Has Highways by Every Barn.

Norfolk, Va., Jan. 1 (A.P.).—Wilson W. Vellines, a member of the House of Delegates from Norfolk, has announced he will seek a two-year moratorium on highway construction. He proposes suspension of road building during the next biennium and the distribution of gasoline tax funds to cities and counties.

Mr. Vellines said he would introduce a resolution in the House on the first day of the general assembly, declaring against any increase in taxation.

He said there appeared to be "a curtailment in everything except road construction," and asserted "we have a road now running by every barn in the State of Virginia."

3 Receivers Appointed For Big Utility Group

DEMOCRATS SCORED ON EXPENSE EXCUSE

(Associated Press.)

Representative Wood, of Indiana, yesterday asserted the Democratic national committee and its treasurer had attempted to "pass the buck" to a firm of accountants in answer to his charges of concealment of expenditures in the 1928 campaign.

James W. Gerard, treasurer, Thursday answered the charges of the Republican congressional committee chairman by saying the reports of the 1928 expenditures had been prepared by the same accountants who prepared the 1924 reports for the Republicans.

"It is pretty small and very unfair for the Democratic national committee and Mr. Gerard to reflect upon the efficiency and the methods of a reputable firm of accountants by attempting to make that firm a scapegoat for the violation of a Federal law by the Democratic national committee and its officers," Representative Wood said.

He insisted the blame could not be passed to the accountants because he had charged violation of the corrupt practices act of 1925, which was not in effect in 1924. The act does not recognize, he said, outside accountants or auditors acting for any political committee, but makes it mandatory upon the treasurer to file the reports of committee expenditures.

"In attempting to shift the responsibility * * * the Democratic committee and Mr. Gerard have contributed very materially to the justice and accuracy of the assumption that the suppression of the pay-roll roster of the Democratic national headquarters in New York City in 1928 was intentional," Representative Wood said, "and was done for some purpose which possibly can not stand the light of publicity."

Crusaders Exult Over Finn Victory

Twit Dry Forces in Statement for Not Making Comment on Vote.

(Associated Press.)

Commenting upon the antiprohibition election victory in Finland, the Crusaders, an organization opposed to the dry laws, announced: "A decade ago an attempt was being made to keep over 300,000,000 people sober at the point of a shotgun, but today all but 123,000,000 have thrown off the yoke of the reformer."

Russia, all of Canada except one province, Norway, Sweden and Finland were listed as going "back to the good old-fashioned method of teaching instead of dragooning people to use alcoholic beverages in moderation."

"The Crusaders search the current news columns in vain for some cheery comment from Messrs. McBride, Dinwiddie, Poling, et al (national prohibition leaders) on the wet result of Finland's referendum," the Crusaders' statement said. "Could it be that these spokesmen of righteousness see no comfort in a 3-to-1 majority for personal liberty and the throwing out of such reformers as themselves?"

High-Voltage Wire Kills Virginia Man and Boy

Broadnax, Va., Jan. 1 (A.P.).—A 10-year-old boy and a man were electrocuted today by coming into contact with a high voltage wire. Vernon Moore, 50, a farmer, was killed when he went to the asistance of Paul Lynch, son of Mr. and Mrs. Willie Lynch, whom he found lying in the ditch beside a rural road.

Officers said the boy had come into contact with a telephone wire which had fallen across a high curent line. Moore, in company with Murry Wesson, found the boy. Wesson rushed toward the boy, thinking he was ill. He was arrested in his act by Moore, who suggested that Wesson go for a doctor. When Wesson returned with a physician, he found Moore's body lying across that of the boy.

Virginia-England Ship Line Planned

Direct Sailings Schedule From Hampton Roads to Begin Soon.

Special to The Washington Post.

Charlottesville, Va., Jan. 1.—Regular direct sailings of cargo ships from Hampton Roads to Great Britain will be scheduled early in the year, according to advices received here by the local chamber of commerce. This announcement follows closely the decision of the Atlantic Conference Steamship Lines to lower the rates on barreled apples in ordinary stowage for British ports to 70 cents a barrel.

Verbon E. Kemp, executive secretary of the local chamber, who directed the recent orchard-to-market tour, estimates that an average saving of 15 cents a barrel can be effected in inland freight charges on shipments from the Charlottesville area to Hampton Roads, as compared with the rail freight charges on barreled apples to New York.

Bicentennial Year Ticks In by Washington Clock

Fredericksburg, Va., Jan. 1 (A.P.).—A grandfather clock that once told time for George Washington today tick-tocked the arrival of the bicentennial anniversary of his birth.

It stood in the home of Mary Ball Washington, the first President's mother, with a microphone nearby, carrying to radio listeners the striking of noon. Just before, Representative Sol Bloom, associate director of the George Washington Bicentennial Commission, announced the striking clock officially would open the two-hundredth anniversary year.

"Ike" Hoover Sets White House Mark

Chief Usher, Embarks on 42d Year in Service of Presidents.

(Associated Press.)

The man who probably knows more about more Presidents than any other living person yesterday entered his forty-second year in the White House. He is Irvin Hoover, chief usher, known to a thousand friends as "Ike," and one of the busiest of the Executive Mansion's personnel. He is the major domo of the entire establishment.

And yesterday was one of his busiest days, his forty-second New Year's Day reception. It was his task to see each newcomer directed to the proper room and group and to supervise the movements of the long lines that filed past the President and Mrs. Hoover for a handshake.

Hoover came to the White House during the term of President Harrison. He was then an electrician, and helped install that then new service in the big house. But once installed some one was needed to look after it, and he has remained ever since.

At 10 o'clock yesterday morning the Weather Bureau issued warning of a disturbance centralized near the Virginia Capes and moving northeastward. Officials of the bureau last night did not think the coast storm would have any bearing on the weather here.

Dry Law Has Missed Goal, Cardinal Says

Philadelphia, Jan. 1 (A.P.).—Declaring that prohibition has not performed the miracles expected, Cardinal Dougherty today called for a revival of the Catholic temperance and total abstinence societies.

Speaking at the new year reception tendered him by sixty societies of the Philadelphia archdiocese, the Cardinal said: "When prohibition was passed, many of us thought there would be no further need for temperance societies, and hence we discontinued the practice of administering a pledge to boys and girls."

Important Discovery In Vitamin B Reported

Berlin, Jan. 1 (A.P.).—A Goettingen dispatch to the Morgenpost said today that Prof. Adolf Windaus, in collaboration with Fritz Lager, of the dye trust, had produced vitamin B-1, a constituent ingredient of "antineuritic" vitamin B, in pure crystallized form.

Prof. Windaus isolated the crystallized vitamin B-1 in yeast, which is rich in B vitamins, the dispatch said. He recently succeeded after four years of experimentation in producing vitamin D, the antirachitic vitamin, in pure crystallized form.

U. OF VA. PROFESSOR WINS SCIENCE PRIZE

tion. Instead, a low but definite form of intelligence may actuate them.

Dr. Speidel is 38 years old and married, a graduate of Lafayette University and holder of a Princeton degree.

Depression is a "profit disease," Dr. Irving Fisher told the association, adding: "Capitalism might be defined as the system of private profits."

"I myself am not so cocksure about capitalism as I was in my youth," he continued. "What I am fairly sure of is that if capitalism finds itself unable to clean the dirt of depression out of its very foundations, called profits, some form of Socialism will devour capitalism."

Much "distress selling" and resulting increase of indebtedness might have been headed off if deflation had been vigorously fought from its very symptom by such agencies as the Federal Reserve System, Fisher declared. The system did act, he said, but it was timid and acted too late, after distress deflation had become an avalanche and irresistible.

Illustrating how the deflated dollar increases indebtedness, Fisher said:

Illustration on Deflation.

"Suppose you hvae a contract to deliver 100 barrels of oil a month for ten months. For convenience, you prepare the entire 1,000 barrels in advance, assembling them on one floor and letting them fill automatically. But they are rubber and will stretch as they fill.

"You don't know this, and you are kept from finding it out because the barrels are jammed together and at first keep each other from stretching. But when the first 100 are delivered, the rest of the barrels bulge into the empty space just as the remaining dollars of our currency bulge into the void left by deflation.

"Thus the more oil you deliver on your contract the more remains undelivered. Well, you call in an expert (I recommend any political economist) and he shows you the barrels had been legally prescribed by the same government that defined the yardstick. Would you call on your congressman?"

Newspaperman in Jail On Contempt Charge

Hopewell, Va., Jan. 1 (A.P.).—J. W. Mapoles, Hopewell, Va., news editor, passed New Year's in jail awaiting the decision of Judge Thomas B. Robertson tomorrow as to whether he will be bailed pending an appeal to Supreme Court of Appeals from a sentence for contempt of Judge Robertson's court. Mapoles was sentenced to serve 30 days in jail because he would not divulge the name of the author of a letter published in his paper.

A writ of habeas corpus was denied yesterday by Judge R. T. Wilson, of the Petersburg Corporation Court. Judge Wilson declined to hear the case on its merits, asserting he was interested only in the question of whether the petitioner was restrained without due process of law.

Congress Gets 10,000 Bills During 17 Days of Session

(United Press.)

More than 10,000 bills, ranging from complete depression cures to provisions for inserting comic strips in the staid Congressional Record, were introduced in Congress during the 17-day session before the holiday adjournment.

Perhaps 1 in 50 of these bits of embryonic legislation will ever be seriously considered by Congress, either in committee hearings or on the floor of the two houses. The remainder are largely intended for the consumption of the "people back home" who are supposed to take such things seriously.

On the whole the bills are prosaic, and being mostly cast by permanent congressional employes who are professional bill writers, show a depressing lack of originality. However, a few rise above the average in literary merit, and repay even the most casual reader.

The all-time prize for readibility and interest is held by Representative John J. Boylan (Democrat), New York, who every session introduces a bill calling for "modernization of the Congressional Record." He would have the Record include comic strips, cartoons, and a colored picture section.

The depression opened a new and fertile field to Congress at the present session and the response was highly intriguing to the lay mind.

The most novel cure for economic troubles, however, is claimed by Representative Emanuel Celler (Democrat), New York, as his original idea. Mr. Celler has introduced a bill which provides for enlisting 250,000 unemployed in the United States Army for the period of one year. His bill does not say what the enlarged Army would be used for.

Aside from the depression, a round-up of bills shows that lobsters are coming in for a good deal of congressional attention. Various bills, memorials and resolutions have been introduced in both houses dealing exhaustively with the shell fish situation. Senator David I. Walsh (Democrat), Massachusetts, is one of the leaders in seafood legislation, having early in the present session presented a memorial detailing just what sort of lobsters should be sold, caught and imported. He is not without followers in the lower chamber.

Many thousands of bills are recorded illustrating the ancient political rule that a vote is a vote. Congress is asked in scores of bills and resolutions to give away everything from land to radio stations. Senator Walter F. George (Democrat), Georgia, has a bill which would give to the City of Savannah, Ga., the naval radio station located in the Southern city.

Other people want postoffices, Indian cemeteries, and free passports.

Legislation for war veterans occupied a large share of attention. Spanish-American War veterans, being mostly middle aged or at least able to toddle to the polls, were the subject of several bills. However, the waning numbers and political influence of Civil War survivors was reflected in the lone public measure dealing with their relief. The young and enthusiastically voting World War veterans were the subject of literally hundreds of bills.

Two Will Be Shot in Back By Forty Italian Riflemen

Caltanissetta, Sicily, Jan 1 (A.P.).—Rather than start the new year with bloodshed, authorities here today postponed execution of two men for murder, but they will be shot in the back at dawn tomorrow.

The executions will be the first for common crime in Italy in 41 years. They will be carried out simultaneously by a double firing squad of 40 men on a hillside near the local penitentiary, probably in public view.

The decision to shoot the men in the back was reached because of the repugnance of their crime, the victim having been only 12 years old. The two will be tied in chairs with their backs to the firing squad of police.

The 40 executioners arrived from Rome today especially for the occasion. They will fire one volley, half of them aiming at one of the murderers, half at the other.

The condemned men will be notified shortly before dawn that their appeal for royal clemency has been denied and the prison chaplain then will offer them the last rites of the church. The pair, Diego Mignemi and Francesco Calafato, were convicted three months ago. The court of appeal upheld the sentence which will be the first to be carried out since the penal code was revised six months ago to restore capital punishment after 41 years.

SNOW AND COLD GRIP WIDE AREAS IN WEST

Kansas City, Jan. 1 (A.P.).—New Year's Day found Old Man Winter meeting with only partial success in his efforts to establish his rule in the Western United States.

The Dakotas, Nebraska and western Kansas bore the brunt of a New Year storm. Wires were down, highways were blocked by huge drifts and zero to subzero temperatures prevailed.

In the Rocky Mountain tier of States, however, there were moderating temperatures with Colorado, Montana, New Mexico and Wyoming lying under a sun that for the most part sent the mercury above the freezing mark. On the West Coast the weather was normal, with no snow or rain.

After a heavy fall throughout South Dakota yesterday, a light snow continued at Sioux Falls. There was a foot of snow at Aberdeen, but temperatures were mild. A sleet and snow storm in eastern South Dakota headed into southern Minnesota. Wire communications west of Canby, Minn., were crippled. In Iowa the snow varied from one to three inches in the western section. Iowa temperatures were mild.

The mercury took a nose dive to 12 below at Bismarck, N. Dak. Other temperatures in North Dakota were generally above zero, with the exception of the southwestern part of the State where subzero readings were recorded.

There were seven inches of snow in parts of southern Minnesota, the heaviest in almost two years.

Scores of motorists in western Nebraska spent the night in farm houses when their cars became stalled on snowblocked highways. Wires in central Nebraska were down and repairs to the lines were impeded by highway conditions. The weather was cloudy with temperatures 25 to 30 above zero.

Snow falling in western Kansas was piled into drifts by a high wind. There was rain in some sections. Temperatures ranging from 15 degrees in the western part and 22 in east Kansas were predicted. The lowest reported Kansas reading was 20 at Goodland.

Spanish Catholics Rap Constitution

Pastoral Letter Urges Union in Defense of Faith.

Madrid, Jan. 1 (A.P.).—Catholics of Spain were urged to unite in defense of the faith in a New Year's pastoral letter issued today by members of the high Spanish clergy who took occasion to launch a vigorous protest against the New Spanish constitution.

That document, they asserted, "denies the church the ordinary rights granted to citizens."

The singers, including two cardinals, seven archbishops, 40 bishops and two vicars, urged that Catholics participate actively in civil and political life to defend the rights of their faith.

Those who marry without the sanctions of the church will be deprived of the benefits of the church, the pastoral letter said, directing this admonition at the intervention of the state in matrimonial matters and divorce. The letter also insists that Catholics defend the right of the church to educate the children of the faithful, in the face of establishment of state control over education.

TORONTO AREA HIT BY SLEET STORMS

Communications Are Cut Off While Fruit Growers Fear Crop Loss.

Toronto, Jan. 1 (A.P.).—One of the worst sleet storms in the history of this district had isolated many western Ontario centers tonight. Telegraph and telephone poles were down and it was feared heavy damage had been caused.

Among the cities without telephone or telegraph communication with the outside were Chatham, Sarnia, Woodstock, St. Thomas, Kitchener, Guelph, Brantford and Galt.

Telephone exchanges in Brampton, Bolton, Georgetown, Cheltenham, Caledon and Streetsville were cut off and the damage was estimated at thousands of dollars.

Linemen were detailed throughout the storm-struck territory to work on the broken wires.

At Brampton, the telephone exchange substituted batteries when the hydro service failed. Cooksville retained connection with Toronto, but rural lines out of there were broken.

Two radio stations here were forced to close down tonight. The antenna blew down at one. The other attributed its difficulty to disrupted telephone communication between the studio and station.

At Niagara Falls, many trees were damaged when limbs broke under the heavy coating of ice. Fruit farmers at Stamford expressed fear that their peach and apple orchards would be damaged. The first heavy snowstorm of the season was reported at Kingston, where high winds prevailed.

Few accidents were reported despite the dangerous conditions on highways covered with a thin sheet of ice.

South African Farmers Warned of Raging Flood

Port Elizabeth, South Africa, Jan. 1 (A.P.).—Messengers tonight hurried through the countryside to warn dwellers on isolated farms and in little townships in the river valleys to retreat to the hills before a flood menace threatening a wide area.

Following upon four days of abnormal rainfall the Sunday and Gamtoos rivers boiled down in flood and banks were burst in several places. The riverside quarters of Japsonville, on the Sunday River, were inundated tonight, and the township of Kirkwood has been isolated since yesterday.

SOVIET AUTOMOBILE PLANT BEGINS WORK

Nizhni-Novgorod, U. S. S. R., Jan. 1 (A.P.).—Soviet Russia's newest and largest automobile manufacturing plant, reared in record time by American engineers to turn out Ford cars, officially began operation today after the ceremonies with which Russians always greet the opening of new industrial enterprises.

Officials in charge of the work hailed the new factory as the foundation of a motorized era for Soviet Russia, in speeches at the plant and in formal reports to Joseph Stalin and government leaders.

Building City Around Plant.

Around the factory, which occupies an area of 300,000 square yards and is said to be the largest of its kind in Europe, is being built a new city some 14 miles from the old City of Nizhni-Novgorod, once the great market place for Middle Asia and China.

It includes 60 four-story apartment houses and 178 small houses for workers and their families, as well as kitchens where communal meals will be dispensed, schools, hospitals, clubs, dining halls, public baths, laundries, theaters and all the other institutions which go to make up a model Soviet city.

Construction and equipment of the plant, which has been named "Molotoff," after Premier Vyacheslaff Molotoff, cost approximately $119,000,000. The construction, under the direction of the Austin Co., of Cleveland, Ohio, was completed November 1, 15 months after the work started. The last two months were devoted to the installation of machinery.

Early Production Small.

The production schedule for the first quarter of this year concentrates on the manufacture of necessary factory instruments, contemplating an output of only 700 automobiles. After that the program calls for progressive production on a scale commensurate with the factory's capacity of 144,000 machines annually, of which 94,000 will be ton-and-a-half trucks and the remainder passenger cars.

The automobiles will be manufactured under an arrangement with the American Ford Co., under which the Detroit manufacturer permits the Soviets to use his patents in exchange for orders for a large number of American-made cars. Russian materials will be used.

Soviet Russia has only one other automobile factory, the Amo plant at Moscow, which began operations October 1 last year. Officials declare that by the end of 1932 the U. S. S. R. will have jumped from fortieth to eighth place among the countries of the world in automobile production.

Professor Ends Life When Girl Snubs Him

Fayetteville, Ark., Jan. 1 (A.P.).—A shot that merrymakers first believed was a firecracker exploding early today killed Roland Benjamin Schaefer, 25, of Milwaukee, instructor in English and German at the University of Arkansas. He shot himself to death after the young woman he escorted to a party went home with another man.

Schaefer left a note, a poem and a hastily written will. The will directed that an engagement ring he had be returned to a jeweler. The contents of the note and the poem will not be made public at least until his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Schaefer, arrive.

Film Theater Operator Fatally Burned in Booth

Huntsville, Texas, Jan. 1 (A.P.).—L. L. Hickson, 27, motion picture machine operator, was burned to death late today in a fire which destroyed the projection room of the Dorothy Theater.

Hickson was alone in the room when the film caught fire, the flames spreading quickly. Sam Parish, owner of the theater, was burned slightly as he vainly tried to rescue the operator. The afternoon show had just ended and none of the theater patrons knew of the fire until they had left the building.

FIRST FOUR IN LINE SHARE HOOVER MEAL

Minneapolis Man Who Told Family to Watch Papers, Is Breakfast Guest.

"Our daddy had breakfast with the President on New Year's Day!"

That's what Martin J. Bredvold's two children out in Minneapolis can tell their playmates Monday when school takes in out in the Minnesota city. Bredvold, a temporary Census Bureau worker, was one of the first four in line yesterday morning to receive the President and Mrs. Hoover's New Year greeting, and was invited with the other three to breakfast in the White House.

Home on a Christmas visit last week, Bredvold told his wife, his 15-year-old son, Miles, and his 14-year-old daughter, Marcelle, that he was going to be one of the first ones in line at the New Year White House reception. "Just watch the papers!" he told them, and they smiled a bit skeptically.

At 5 a. m. yesterday, Bredvold arrived at the Executive Mansion portals. Two others, William L. Wilson, of Holyoke, Mass., and Otto C. Kafer, of Dallas, Tex., were ahead of him, but he was well content with third place. Later Walter Barrows, of Takoma Park, joined the small coterie waiting in the damp morning air.

At 6:30 a White House policeman summoned them to the shelter of the executive offices, and at 8 o'clock they met President Hoover. The quartet was then ushered in for a hearty breakfast, which Bredvold said consisted of eggs and bacon, corn muffins "and awfully good coffee."

Bredvold admitted that the White House breakfast invitation far surpassed any expectations he had held and chuckled at the picture in his mind of his family reading about his experience in the Minneapolis papers.

D street, Otto C. Kafer, 122 B street northeast, Morton J. Brevold, 218 Fifth street southeast, and 14-year-old Walter Barrows, of Takoma Park.

J. W. Hunefeld, the painter from northeast Washington, who has been first in the line for five years, refused the breakfast invitation, for with the departure of the others he became first at the gate.

The quartet was escorted to the mansion by a member of the White House police force. After being greeted by the President, they breakfasted on bacon, eggs, muffins and coffee.

Two girls, Louise Plummer, 1410 M street northwest, and Miss Jane Bartleman, of Atlantic City, who joined the line after 8 o'clock were asked to wait in the White House, out of the rain, after the President saw them.

At the earlier reception, the Army and Navy leaders were followed by the commanding general of the staff of the District National Guard, the Coast Guard, Public Health Service, and the Coast and Geodetic Survey. The officers in this section were not below the rank of lieutenant colonel or commander.

After, came a section which was made up of high Government officials, among them being executive assistants of Cabinet members, regents and secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, and representatives from all the Government departments and bureaus.

This group was followed by members of patriotic organizations, civic and military organizations, among which were: The Society of the Cincinnati, the Aztec Club, the Associated Veterans of the War of 1846-47, Military Order of Loyal Legion of the United States, Grand Army of the Republic, Veterans of Foreign Wars, the Union Veterans Legion, Society of the Army of San Diego, Spanish War Veterans, American Legion, Army and Navy Union, the Minute Men, Society of Colonial Wars, Sons of the American Revolution, and the Association of Oldest Inhabitants of the District of Columbia.

Barnes, who confessed, police said, declared he had been "living in hell" for ten years. He was 70 years old and had been an employe of the city for 50 years.

The couple, Mr. and Mrs. Mason Posey, each 71 years of age, who had just left their apartment, are said to have stepped in the path of a taxicab driven west in Columbia road by Ralph Pierce, 33, of 3504 Georgia avenue northwest.

Both suffered severe abrasions and bruises on their bodies. Mrs. Posey is believed also to have suffered a fractured hip.

NEW YEAR MASSES BARRED IN MEXICO

Mexico City, Jan. 1 (A.P.).—Mexico's capital acked New Year masses in its Catholic churches today as the religious situation reached an impasse.

Church services throughout the Federal district (Mexico City) were suspended by government order in churches where the priests had not yet complied with the new law limiting the clergy to one for every 50,000 inhabitants, a total of 25 for the district, and calling for their registration.

Archbishop Pascual Diaz, on the other hand, had ordered the priests not to comply with the new law. As a consequence, no masses were said, although the churches remained open. The government also has ordered that nothing be taken from the churches as they and the property in them belong to the government.

Raids on Reds in Chile Net Numerous Arrests

Army reservists were called to the colors for immediate duty at Concepcion on account of a report that extremist agitation was growing among the city's 20,000 needy. The south, however, was reported quiet. Luis Orrego Luco, former Chilean Minister to Montevideo, was quoted by newspapers as saying plans for a Red uprising in northern Chile had existed in Montevideo since 1930. One night, he said, two Red agents stole into the legation, intending to kill him for finding out their secrets, but he escaped injury.

"SOOKY". Paramount picturization of a story by Percy Crosby, adapted to the screen by Sam Mintz, Joe Mankiewicz and Norman McLeod, featuring Jackie Cooper and Bobby Coogan, supported by Jackie Searl, Willard Robertson, Enid Bennett, Helen Jerome Eddy, Guy Oliver, Harry Beresford and Oscar Apfel. Directed by Norman Taurog. Reviewed Friday afternoon.

By NELSON B. BELL.

Pitched in the same key, played by the same people and in the same manner alternating intervals of high humor with passages of utmost pathos, this new adaptation from Mr. Crosby's comic cartoon strips may be relied upon to please equally all who were pleased by "Skippy," and for identical reasons.

This is but a continuation of the story of Skippy's valiant effort to safeguard his little pal, who lives with his poverty-stricken mother over in Shantytown, on the other side of the tracks, and to prevent their being harassed by the authorities and consigned to what Skippy is pleased to term a "stistution" operated by the county. There are, of course, the minor matters of Skippy's father's being the political rival of Sidney Saunders' papa for the office of mayor, and lively antagonism between Sidney and Skippy as commanding generals of the Boone Boys and the Beagle Boys, from which the greater part of the drama's humor is derived. These ramifications of plot, however, are secondary to the firm grasp which the sponsors of this picture are demonstrated to have had upon the mental processes and psychological reactions of small boys.

There is nothing in "Sooky" that fails to ring true. It all could happen. It probably never did, but it could.

While the early movement of the film presents an almost unbroken succession of amusing incidents, the closing sequences tug sorely and tenaciously at the heart strings. The climacteric scenes of "Sooky," precisely as was the case in "The Champ," and largely through the same instrumentalities, are drenched in a flood of tears.

The piece is above reproach in the manner of its principals' assumption and interpretation of their roles. While this picture by actual, as well as titular right, should belong to Master Bobby Coogan, who here, incidentally, shows vast improvement over his work in "Skippy," it still is dominated by the unbelievably deft play upon the emotions exercised by the prodigious Master Jackie Cooper. It would be pleasant now if Jackie might be cast in a part that would permit him to be continuously and boyishly happy instead of so perpetually torn by the bitterest anguish that can come to youthful hearts.

Willard Robertson and Enid Bennett again appear as Dr. and Mrs. Herbert Skinner, Skippy's parents; Jackie Searl is the priggish little Sidney; Helen Jerome Eddy, Mrs. Wayne, Snooky's mother; Oscar Apfel, Mr. Krausemeyer, the neighborhood grocer. Harry Beresford contributes a brief but salient bit as the indigent Mr. Willoughby, who is bundled off to the poor farm. Minor roles are judiciously assigned.

The fifth edition of "Loew's Vaudeville Revue," devised by Gene Ford, brings a small but richly endowed group of artists to the stage. Ted Claire, singer, dancer and raconteur, acts as master of ceremonies and keeps the revue handsomely in motion. He introduces first the Phelps Twins, those two gorgeous blondes whose vocal harmonies and rhythmic stepping alone would be worth the price of admission, such luscious ladies are they. Then Jerry and Her Baby Grands, the most distinguished piano act extant, create a mild panic with their four-piano renditions of standard and popular medleys, always a delightful offering. Burns and Kissen are singing comedians who get over in a big way, and John and Mary Mason, roller skating experts, who add a touch of novelty to the customary evolutions on a hazardously small floor. Roundly applauded.

The Hearst Metrotone News, orchestral prelude and Charles Gaige's pipe organ interludes—the only ones left in town, by the way—complete a bill that is contrived almost as much for the benefit of those who like to laugh as for those who like to cry.

FOX

"DELICIOUS." Fox production starring Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell, supported by El Brendel, Raul Roulien and Virginia Cherrill. Directed by David Butler. George Gershwin's music featured. Reviewed (second week) by Don B. Reed.

A personal appearance by George E. Stone, character actor of many recent screen hits, and an unusually fine Fanchon & Marco idea, called "Three Big Figures," add considerable luster to the Fox second week presentation of the latest Gaynor-Farrell opera. The fact that the picture is being held over a second week at this house is proof enough of its attractiveness to the cinema-going public.

Mr. Stone, who will be remembered for his excellent portrayals in "Cimarron," "Little Caesar," "Front Page" and "Five Star Final," is cleverly introduced by Les Stevens, master of ceremonies, and promptly wins his audience by his agreeable and dynamic personality. He explains that he is not as tough as his film characters would make him seem; that getting into the movies is not quite as easy as falling off a log; that it is good to hear applause after seven years of nothing but directors orders, and winds it up with a 1932 prosperity song called "Making the Best of Each Day." The act was neatly offered and enthusiastically received.

Foley and Lea Toure, comedians and possessors of good voices, topped the "Three Big Figures" idea, closely followed by Harold Stanton, tenor, in popular melodies; the five Jansley's experts in the art of human juggling; Muriel Gardner, an acrobatic toe dancer, and Louis Barrison, who executes a lot of intricate dance routines on stilts. Les Stevens and the Diplomats present a three-solo overture, with Les doing a saxaphone bit. All four numbers struck a popular chord.

As for "Delicious," need more be said than that Gaynor and Farrell have a swell love theme; that George Gershwin has written a lot of good music for it; that a newcomer, Raul Roulin, adds to the interest with a splendid performance, and that El Brendel is funnier than ever?

RKO-KEITH'S

"MEN OF CHANCE." RKO picturization of Louis Weitzenkorn's story, featuring Ricardo Cortez, Mary Astor and John Halliday. Directed by George Archainbaud. Reviewed Friday night by Dorothea Lewis.

Ricardo Cortez on the screen and Miss Vanessi on the stage seem to carry off first honors this week at RKO-Keith's.

Cortez, with his dynamic and likable characterization of Diamond Johnny Silk, provides the chief interest of "Men of Chance," the story which was penned, apparently in an off moment, by Louis Weitzenkorn, of "Five-Star Final" fame.

According to its unfolding, Marthe, a young American art student, broke and stranded in Paris, is picked up by Dorval and Farley, two crooked bookmakers, and is primed for a part in the "getting" of Diamond Johnny, who plays the races all too well, being responsible for most of the red ink on the bookmakers' ledgers. Masquerading as a countess, to assure Diamond Johnny of the "class" he is hunting, Marthe plays her part well enough to become his wife. Eventually she falls in love with him but unwittingly betrays him to his racing rivals.

Entertaining in spots, the picture lags considerably, so that several horse racing shots are the only speedy things in it.

Cortez, however, is much better than merely good in one of those flashy roles he does so well. Mary Astor looks her usual lovely, patrician self but plays with a dead, toneless voice. John Halliday is, as always, charmingly bored, and utters the lame dialogue as though each word were one of wisdom. Georges Davis is an amusing Frenchman, while Kitty Kelly is an unamusing American.

On the stage, Miss Vanessi again has much of her familiar act. In fact, she still has the Rhumba, in much subdued form. Infinitely graceful, she delights in all her numbers but the rainbow scarf dance is loveliest of all. The four young men, who make up her company, sing and dance engagingly.

Rae Samuels presents her usual character songs with audiences demanding more and more and getting it. Indeed, Friday, "The Madame" seemed to enjoy it so much that she simply wanted to stay. Her surprise is a pretty and clever little entertainer.

Harry J. Conley, that Lloyd Hamiltonish comedian, is thoroughly, impossibly, and, at times, convulsingly ridiculous in an act penned by that super mad-chatter artist, Dr. Rockwell. His fine Italian hand has given Conley humor and cleverness and at times—sad to say—commonness.

The Beehee and Rubyatte troup of whirling acrobats opens the bill, and Chamberlin and Himes waste considerable time before getting around to an amusing revision of the apache dance.

COLUMBIA

"POSSESSED." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's picturization of Edgar Selwyn's play, "The Mirage," adapted by Lenore Coffee, starring Joan Crawford with Clark Gable, supported by Wallace Ford, "Skeets" Gallagher, Frank Conroy, Marjorie White, John Miljan and Clara Blandick. Directed by Clarence Brown. Reviewed Friday afternon by Dorothea Lewis.

In its second week and on second thought, this picture seems even better than we thought it at a first viewing on Christmas Day.

Its story of the little country girl who did not wait at home for the city slicker to come and do wrong by her, but rushed headlong to the city to find him and then, having found him and loved him, stepping gracefully and sacrificially out of the way of his career, is certainly, as we have said before, highly improbable. But it is handled with such a nice appearance of reality by Joan Crawford, Clark Gable, Director Brown and all concerned, that you'll probably believe it as well as like it. You're almost sure to do the latter.

In "Possessed," our hero and heroine seem to have reached just about the high points of a duo of as surprising metamorphoses as any ever taking place in that queer Hollywood—Joan starting as our favorite dancing daughter, Clark as a sinister and brutal gangster whom we some months go, may the cinema gods forgive us, likened to Leo Brother of Jake Lingle killing fame.

Of other members in the cast, Wallace Ford as a small town love of Joan's should be commended for a nice performance of an ungrateful part and Skeets Gallagher for a few amusing moments.

METROPOLITAN

"AROUND THE WORLD IN 80 MINUTES." United Artists' travelogue-comedy, starring Douglas Fairbanks, assisted by Victor Fleming, "Chuck" Lewis and Henry Sharp. Directed by Victor Fleming. Reviewed Friday afternoon by Don B. Reed.

There may be nothing new in the films, as many contend, but this Douglas Fairbanks feature is at least out of the ordinary. And very entertaining. It lacks love interest and, aside from Mr. Fairbanks, it has no "name" stars, but in general construction, action, photography and dialogue it ranks with the best that have been presented.

Briefly, "Around the World in 80 Minutes" is the story of a recent trip around the world taken by Mr. Fairbanks. The party consisted of the star, Victor Fleming, who directed; Mr. Lewis, who was production manager, and Henry Sharp, who did all the photographic work.

It was a pleasure trip first and a cinema expedition secondly. However, the results constitute 80 minutes of real entertainment if you have any flair at all for the unusual and like snappy comment along with your scenery.

The tour opens in Honolulu and introduces Duke Kahanamoku, the famous swimmer; moves on to Japan where Sessue Hayakawa is on hand to greet Doug; reveals a startlingly clear view of Fujiyama, the volcano covered with snow; then into Hongkong; from China to the Philippine Islands, where Gen. Aguinaldo is introduced to the audience; thence to Angkor in Indo-China and on into Bangkok, Siam, where the king and queen, recent guests of America, entertain Doug at the palace.

Scenes along the immortal Ganges River conclude the foreign shots and a magic carpet whisks the party back to Hollywood, not without some humor as the flying rug passes over a Midwestern city.

Dialogue and incidental music add immeasurably to this production. Doug has a keen sense of humor, which enters into all his descriptions. There are several amusing "cracks" at Graham McNamee; an exceedingly funny interlude imitating a cigarette radio advertisement; a Siamese dance by Mickey Mouse and a number of other incidents which tend to make the travelogue entertaining as well as instructive. The entire trip has been well handled and includes one thrill—a leopard hunt in the jungle with a burlesque chase by Doug.

Auxiliary features of the program are far above average. Vitaphone's presentation of Horace Heidt and His Californians is almost worth the price of admission alone. If there is a more versatile band before the public, this reviewer would like to see and hear it. And if you think twelve violins, a drum and a piano can't get hot, drop in on this one. A Looney Tune, called "Bosko's Fox Hunt," is funny and a good issue of the Paramount Sound News completes a bill of all-around merit.

RIALTO

"STRICTLY DISHONORABLE." Universal picturization of the stage play by Preston Sturges, adapted to the screen by Gladys Lehman, featuring Paul Lukas, Sidney Fox and Lewis S. Stone, supported by William Ricciardi, George Meeker and Sidney Toler. Directed by John M. Stahl.

It was the part of excellent judgment to continue the run of this superlatively fine film through a second week. For here is a screen narrative that possesses a majority of the virtues and few of the shortcomings with which so many phonoplays are so thickly beset. It has interest, humor, charm, zest and intimacy. The number of its characters is small, but they all soon become friends and the spectator a member of the group intent upon fostering the romance engendered in the life of Isabelle, the ingenuous young woman from the deep South, during a late visit to an almost deserted speakeasy with her ostensible fiance, an insufferable cad.

Novelty of surrounding, perhaps, has something to do with the fascination exerted by this demure young lady, the inebriated solicitude of the good Judge Dempsey and the eventual abandonment of a sinister plan by Gus, the grand opera star, who encounters first temptation and then love where he least expected either.

These pivotal roles are portrayed with consummate skill by Sidney Fox, Lewis S. Stone and Paul Lukas. William Ricciardi is no less perfect as Tomassa, proprietor of the illicit establishment in which all of the events of the story befall, and George Meeker does so effective a job as the fiance that one constantly hopes he will be served as ill as he deserves at the hand of Mulligan, the cop, amusingly played by Sidney Toler.

There is an actuality about the settings that is no less potent an aid to the picture's effectiveness than the pleasant realism of its performance.

The bill is augmented by abbreviated sound subjects and a new issue of the Universal News, in which the important events of the day are outlined by the Talking Reporter.

NURSERY DAMAGED $10,000 BY FLAMES

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

Fire of unknown origin swept through the storerooms of the George A. Leissler's Nurseries, on the Lee highway near Leeway, Arlington County, at an early hour yesterday morning, causing damage estimated at $10,000.

The fire was discovered by Carl Leissler, 7 years old, who was awakened by the bright light from the flames. He called his father, George Leissler, jr., who sounded an alarm which brought out the entire fire fighting forces of Arlington County, together with the department from McLean, Fairfax County.

Fighting the fire for more than three hours with several streams of water forced from a distance of more than half a mile, the firemen were able to save thousands of dollars worth of property which was in close proximity to the burning building.

Mr. Leissler, sr., seen after the fire, said that while it was a great loss to the plant, the building would be immediately replaced, together with the lost equipment.

She believed the maid to be on the premises and expected to find the door open, but feared that the place was being robbed.

Firemen placed a ladder to the second story window and unlocked the front door. The maid later appeared and explained that she had gone out for awhile and locked the front door.

At the 11 o'clock service the Rev Dr. Benjamin W. Meeks, superintendent of the Washington District of the Methodist Episcopal Church, will preach. In the evening, at 7:45 o'clock, the minister, the Rev. Dr. H. W. Burgan, will preach. Hamline's chorus choir will sing at both services.

The present church structure was erected as a result of the merger of the old Hamline and Iowa Avenue Methodist Episcopal Churches. The old Hamline Church was organized July 2, 1865, and was located at Ninth and P streets northwest. The Iowa Avenue Church was organized September 19, 1909, and was located at Fourteenth and Emerson streets northwest.

The union of the two churches took place in 1924. The site for the present church was purchased immediately, and ground was broken for the new Hamline Church by President Calvin Coolidge on July 28, 1924. The present church building was dedicated January 3, 1926.

Hamline Church is named in honor of Bishop Leonidas Lent Hamline, who was born in 1797 and died in 1865. The church plant cost about $325,000 and now has nearly 1,000 members.

Dr. Phillips to Preach On Buddhism Religion

Dr. Z. B. Phillips, rector of the Church of the Epiphany, will lecture on "The Religious Significance of Buddhism" at the evening service at 8 o'clock tomorrow. The question has arisen as to whether Buddhism has any doctrine of God.

This question and its significance will be discussed tomorrow night.

Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "I will mention the loving-kindnesses of the Lord, and the praises of the Lord, according to all that the Lord hath bestowed on us, and the great goodness toward the house of Israel, which he hath bestowed on them according to the multitude of his loving-kindnesses" (Isaiah lxiii:7).

The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science Textbook "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Jesus acknowledged no ties of the flesh. He said: 'Call no man your father upon the earth: for one is your Father, which is in heaven'."

HYMNOLOGY STUDY INTRIGUES CHURCHES

Facts Regarding Authors and Composers of Tunes Told Congregations.

By FRANK J. METCALF.

The congregations in one of the churches in Washington are having an opportunity of learning some facts about hymnology at each service. For two years the bulletins of the Mount Pleasant Congregational Church have carried upon the page following the order of service annotations upon the three hymns and the two anthems sung during that service. Thus during the period when bulletins are printed (about eight months in the year) at least 100 hymns have been used, and the facts about the writers of both hymns and music have been set before the people.

During the same period about the same number of anthems have received similar attention. The attendants at church have in this way become more or less acquainted with those who have contributed the musical portion of their devotions, and their worship has become the more enjoyable, and may we not say more profitable. This feature has involved considerable labor and research for the chorister, Norton M. Little, who has prepared the manuscript each week.

Hymns Start Revival.

Had we been in the congregation when the hymn was given out, beginning, "Love divine, all loves excelling," we could have read the following:

"The middle of the eighteenth century marked the heighth of the great revival period. It wrought a great change in the Church of England. For 200 years the Anglican church had been the state church, and practically the only church in England. It had grown careless and gross. Its worship had tended to a mere formalism, with no life or feeling in it. The music was confined to the Psalters, with little or no participation by the congregation.

"The reform movement began within the church without any thought of withdrawal from it. In this movement the three Wesley brothers, Samuel, John and Charles, entered with zeal. They felt that new hymns with singable tunes were needed, and they wrote them. With Watts, Doddridge and others, they revolutionized the congregational participation in church worship. The youngest of the group, Charles, was the greatest of the three in hymn production. Our processional, "Love Divine," is one of his best-known hymns. It was a favorite of Henry Ward Beecher, who felt it had no adequate tune. Zundel was his organist. Hearing Dr. Beecher complain of the tune, he composed the one we use, and had it sung for him the following Sunday.

Tune Is Called Beecher.

This tune is named Beecher.

The last hymn of the morning service was the following:

Hark! the voice of Jesus calling,
"Who will go and work today?
Fields are white and harvests waiting,
Who will bear the sheaves away?"
Loud and long the Master calleth,
Rich reward He offers thee;
Who will answer, gladly saying,
"Here am I, send me, send me"?

If you can not cross the ocean,
And the heathen lands explore,
You can find the heathen nearer,
You can help them at your door.
If you can not give your thousands,
You can give the widow's mite;
And the least you give for Jesus
Will be precious in His sight.

Let none hear you idly saying,
"There is nothing I can do,"
While the souls of men ar dying,
And the Master calls for you.
Take the task He gives you gladly,
Let His work your pleasure be;
Answer quickly when He calleth,

Work of Daniel March.

This is Mr. Little's comment: "The recessional is the work of an American Congregational minister, Daniel March, born in 1816. He says the hymn was written on the spur of the moment to follow a sermon preached by him in the Clinton Street Church, Philadelphia, in 1868. Dr. March was the author of a book, famous in its day, called "Night Scenes in the Bible."

"The tune (Ellesdie) is a theme from Mozart, arranged by Hubert P. Main, an American organist and composer, chiefly remembered as a member of the publishing house of Biglow & Main. He wrote many of the so-called Gospel Hymns and a number of cantatas, generally of a very light and popular type."

Do you not enjoy the music and are you not more helped by it when you can connect it with some personality? At the end of a year the regular attendant at this church will have had the chance to sing the hymns of the church and to become somewhat acquainted with those who have written the words as well as the music used.

Much interest has been aroused of late in the history of hymn and tune writers, and Mr. Little is doing a fine piece of work in presenting to those who listen to his choir the results of his researches and thus helping them to a better understanding of the music they hear.

A series of Sunday afternoon lectures will open at the Central Y. M. C. A. tomorrow at 4 o'clock, in the assembly hall. The general theme will be "The March of Christianity Around the World."

The lectures will be illustrated by motion pictures showing the Master Teacher at work in Palestin nineteen centuries ago, and His spirit at work in the world today. Many of these pictures were made in connection with the great motion picture, "The King of Kings," while others were secured in Palestine, so as to give the accurate background.

The subject for the first lecture will be "The World Into Which Jesus Was Born." Two motion pictures will be shown, one on "Primitive Religions" and the other, "When Jesus Was Born." The latter picture will show the Holy Land as it was at the time of the birth of Christ—Herod's Temple, with its crowd of worshipers, the tax collectors, the shepherds in the fields, the journey to Bethlehem and the worship of the new-born King.

ST. ANDREW GROUPS WILL HONOR FEB. 22

Corporate Communion With Breakfast Arranged at Epiphany Church.

Preliminary plans of the fourth annual corporate communion for men and boys on Washington's Birthday, February 22, under the auspices of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew, were announced yesterday by H. Lawrence Choate, chairman of the committee in charge. Bishop James E. Freeman hopes that there will be an unusually large attendance at the service, which will be held in the Church of the Epiphany at 8 a. m. Special parking facilities will be made available with the cooperation of the Metropolitan Police Department.

Bishop Freeman will be the celebrant and principal speaker at the fellowship breakfast following the service. The theme will be "Washington, the Patriot and Churchman."

In addition to Mr. Choate, who is former national president of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew, the officers of the Washington's Birthday committee include Arthur Houghton, vice chairman; N. W. Dorsey, treasurer, and James A. DeForce secretary.

At a recent meeting of the Interparochial Men's committee for the Diocese of Washington it was decided not to hold an annual dinner this year, but rather to combine that event with the corporate communion and breakfast on February 22. Invitations to all the parishes in the diocese of Washington to participate in the program are being issued, and visitors to Washington at the beginning of the George Washington Bicentennial celebration will be cordially welcomed at both the service and the breakfast. Distinguished lay speakers will be announced by Bishop Freeman in the near future.

The next meeting of the general committee in charge will be held at the Diocesan Office, 1320 K street, on Wednesday evening, January 13.

Baptists Welcome Good Will Church

Ecclesiastical Council of Washington Area Admits Society.

A largely attended ecclesiastical council of between 20 and 30 Baptist churches of Washington and vicinity representing the constituency of 21,000 Baptists, met in the new Good Will Baptist Church, Sixteenth and U streets, northwest, to consider the advisability of formally recognizing the Good Will Baptist Church, a newly organized body of about 150 members.

The council was called to order by Dr. William D. Jarvis, pastor of the New Bethel Baptist Church. Dr. George O. Bulock, pastor of the Third Baptist Church, was elected Moderator. Dr. J. R. Loving, secretary of the Baptist Ministers Conference of Washington and vicinity was elected clerk of the council.

After devotional exercises were conducted by the Rev. James Jones, pastor of the new St. James Baptist Church and the Rev. J. C. Olden, of the Shiloh Baptist Church, the call of the council was read and also the minutes of the organization of the new church, which showed that the church was organized according to the New Testament Scriptures, and adopted the Word of God as their guide and the Eighteen Articles of Faith in Hiscock's Baptist Church Directory.

After a full and free discussion, the council decided by a large majority to welcome the new church into the sisterhood of Baptist churches of the District of Columbia and vicinity.

TURN BONDS INTO MONEY.

The amount of cash withdrawn from banks and hoarded by the people is estimated at $1,000,000,000. If this cash were in banks it would furnish a basis of credit amounting to twenty times as much, or $20,000,000,000.

The total amount of money nominally in circulation is over $4,800,000,000, amounting to $38 per capita. The amount actually in circulation is much less. The people have withdrawn and hoarded immense sums from circulating money, as well as from banks. The amount hoarded is unknown, but it is conservatively estimated that the total is equivalent to the shrinkage of $40,000,000,000 of credit.

The value of stocks diminished $60,000,000,000 after the market crash in 1929, affecting 17,000,000 stockholders. Real estate and other property diminished in value. Much of the apparent loss was unreal, because of fictitious values, but there were real losses running into billions. Property is now undervalued, because of pessimism and loss of confidence. Much property will recover normal value when confidence is restored.

There is a stringency of money in circulation. The dollar has an abnormal value because of the scarcity of dollars. A dollar will buy $1.45 worth of commodities. It will buy ten times as much stock on the New York Stock Exchange as it could buy in 1929. It can buy 40 per cent more factory labor. Millions of citizens are unable to obtain these dollars at any price in exchange for labor.

The country needs more dollars—not inflated dollars, but 100-cent gold value dollars.

Section 4 of the Federal reserve act authorizes the reserve banks to deposit United States Government bonds with the circulating privilege and receive from the Comptroller of the Currency Federal Reserve Bank notes of the same par value as the bonds.

Congress is about to authorize the issuance of bonds to help make up the Treasury deficit. Why should not these bonds carry the circulating privilege, and be exchanged for Federal Reserve bank notes? The release of $1,000,000,000 in Federal Reserve bank notes, secured by the equivalent in bonds, would release $20,000,000,000 of credit on a solid gold basis.

At present there are no bonds with the circulating privilege available for deposit with the Comptroller of the Currency. Unless the circulating privilege is stipulated in the forthcoming issue the Treasury will still further draw upon the public money resources, which are already too scanty to do the country's business. With the bonds exchangeable for Federal Reserve bank notes, the Treasury could pay out these notes for Government expenditures and thus put new money in circulation, thereby releasing an immense amount of credit.

With the passing of the emergency the bonds and notes should be retired, as the dollar and commodity prices will have returned to normal and there will be no need of extra circulation.

The Federal Reserve act contemplates the issuance of Federal Reserve bank notes secured by United States bonds, in times of emergency. The emergency now exists, and yet the relief provided for by law has not been granted by Congress.

THE FINNISH WET VOTE.

With prohibition causing such universal discussion in this country, with political parties divided on the subject, and various organizations calling for a referendum, it is not surprising that the result of the voting in Finland on the repeal of the prohibition laws in that country should attract attention. Partial returns in Helsingfors show an unexpectedly heavy wet majority that leads the antiprohibitionists to claim certain victory for repeal.

Finland has had national prohibition for about the same period as the United States, and all the arguments familiar here for and against it have been heard in the referendum campaign just closed. A wet victory will add an additional argument for the campaign here that prohibition opponents will not fail to use. If the situation were the same in the United States, requiring only a majority of the popular vote to command repeal of prohibition, a much more intense and immediate fight would be in progress.

However, since a two-thirds vote of Congress is necessary to provide a test of opinion on constitutional amendments, and a three-fourths vote of the States to actually effect a change, the most optimistic among the antiprohibitionists can not visualize an early change. A vote may be forced in Congress during the current session on the subject, but it can be nothing more than an expression of opinion.

The repeal arguments heard in Finland have a most familiar sound. The antis claimed that prohibition did not make for true temperance and that the government income was suffering the loss of revenue that went to enrich dealers in illicit liquor. Supporters found benefits from prohibition, and claimed that cheap bootleg liquor under any system would continue to be sold, defeating expectations of large excise receipts. Success of the repeal of the prohibitory laws has been discounted to the extent that measures are already being prepared to provide for absolute government control of the sale of liquor. As in this country, even those opposed to constitutional prohibition are, as a rule, equally opposed to return of the saloon. Finland, it is predicted, will adopt a rationing system something like that of Canada. Two somewhat surprising features are noted in the Finland voting. One is the small vote favoring modification of the laws to permit light wines, and the other is the large proportion among the women who voted against prohibition.

THE DEMOCRATIC RACE.

Speculation as to who will be the Democratic candidate for President has reached a point where actual figures are being set down to represent the potential strength of the leading aspirants. Most of the State delegations are classified into one of three groups. They are either for Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt of New York or for favorite sons from their home States, or they are in the doubtful column.

This fact suggests a commanding position for Gov. Roosevelt. Apparently he is the only candidate outside of the favorite-son class who will actively seek the nomination before the convention begins, although Gov. Albert C. Ritchie of Maryland seems to be on the verge of climbing into the ring of major candidates. But in reality Gov. Roosevelt's position is much weaker than it appears. Indications are that the crop of favorite sons will be unusually large. They will hold back sufficient votes to prevent an early nomination, and it is not improbable that much of the strength that is now behind these candidates will be centered upon one major opponent for Gov. Roosevelt.

One other reason why the apparent strength of Gov. Roosevelt is elusive is the inactivity of other formidable candidates. Newton D. Baker still remains in the background. He is quite willing that Ohio's vote go to Gov. White or some other favorite son from that State. His sharp political instinct impels him to keep out of the favorite-son class. But no one doubts that the former Secretary of War will be in a receptive mood when the strategic moment arrives.

Al Smith is another unknown quantity in the race. There seems to be no question that the 1928 candidate wants another chance to defeat President Hoover. Mr. Smith is not in a position to make an active preconvention campaign, but he is waiting in ominous silence to see whether Democracy needs a man of the hour. When all of these forces, including the two-thirds rule for nominations in the Democratic convention, are brought together the opposition to Gov. Roosevelt is formidable, to say the least. The first numerical calculations give him about 100 votes less than a majority, or about 335 less than enough to win.

Many of the favorite sons can not be considered as serious contenders. Gov. Murray of Oklahoma and Gov.-Senator Long of Louisiana, for example, will serve chiefly to amuse the convention. Nevertheless, a considerable number of substantial candidates are looking forward to a deadlock that might give them a "break." These include Speaker Garner, Senator Robinson, former Gov. Byrd, Senator Lewis and Gov. Moore of New Jersey. In addition various candidates who are content to have their names mentioned in the convention will try to keep the votes scattered.

Gov. Roosevelt suffers from one other handicap, and that is the recent intimation that he is the choice of the Republican insurgents. Millions of substantial Democratic voters would hesitate to cast their ballots for their party's candidate if he should be identified with Socialists who think the depression can be cured by raiding the Federal Treasury.

SCIENTIFIC SPECULATION.

Science is beginning to recognize its own limitations. The tendency of some geologists, astronomers and biologists to explain anything and everything pertaining to their fields of research is giving way to acknowledgment that science can not penetrate into the mysteries of life and the universe. Eminent scientists frown upon the dissemination of unsupported theories in the guise of scientific truth.

Idle speculation in science was condemned at both the annual meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science at New Orleans and at the sessions of the American Astronomy Society in Washington. Prof. E. W. Brown, of Yale University, retiring president of the astronomical body, declared that unsupported speculation "often does more harm than good." Undeveloped ideas and suggestions have no place in science. Wild speculation leads away from observation and research, which are the true methods of the scientist. Any one can guess or formulate fantastic theories. When the scientist speaks the public expects him to deal with facts and known phenomena, and carefully to differentiate between theory and truth.

Prof. D. W. Bridgeman, Harvard physicist, turned his criticism against the scientists who are engaged in a controversy over whether or not the universe is running down. At present, he said, science has no means whatsoever to find the answer to these questions. Prof. Bridgeman concludes that "it is illegitimate to apply to the physical system conclusions based on very infrequent occurrences in the model of the universe designed by the scientists, which is essentially a mathematical model." Conditions under which the universe was formed may have been entirely different from those prevailing at the time and place that model universes are set in motion. Actual data on the formation and destiny of the solar system are so meager that no one knows whether or not the processes of creation have been arrested. No true scientist is presumptuous enough to suppose that he understands the secrets of world building which are hidden by aeons of unrecorded time.

A new theory of how the universe came into being was offered to the American Association for the Advancement of Science by Dr. Ross Gunn. He postulates that in the beginning there was one immense body spinning at a terrific rate. The strain of electric and magnetic forces upon this star was so great that it finally split into two parts, one of which became the sun and the other of which was lost in space. Under this theory the planets, including the earth, are smaller fragments that broke off from the sun during the splitting process.

This is interesting speculation for alert minds to chew upon, but if it is served to the lay public as an authentic version of how the world began the result is to discredit science in its entirety. Science can not gain the confidence of the public until it more carefully separates demonstrated facts from speculative theories. When science makes plain that it does not pretend to hold keys to the inscrutable mysteries of the universe the public will be more inclined to accept its conclusions on vitamins and vaccinations.

If the Democratic party wins public confidence by its statesmanship during the present session, and if the party closes the wet-and-dry breach, and if it formulates a platform acceptable to the people, and if it nominates a candidate who commands country-wide confidence and enthusiasm, and if the depression continues, and if Republicans become Democrats in sufficient numbers, a Democratic President may be elected this year.

It is claimed that America spends 3 per cent of its income for medical care. Imagine what it would amount to if people paid the doctors.

That "graft" inquiry in New York has been called the "brightest show in town." Probably because all the Tammany leaders had boxes.

There is little difference between Republican, Democratic and New Year parties. They all give the country a headache.

GREAT SMOKY PARK

From the Atlanta Constitution.

The value of the Great Smoky Mountains National Park to the South Atlantic States, as well as to the whole country, is outlined by Dr. Ray Lyman Wilbur, Secretary of the Interior, in his speech of acceptance of the deeds to the lands to this great park.

The Great Smoky, Dr. Wilbur points out, is the only large park in the eastern half of the country.

Deed to two-thirds of the area of the Great Smoky Park have already been accepted by the Government and the work of securing the remaining property is progressing rapidly. When completed, the park will not only be the largest within a radius of more than 1,500 miles, but it will be one of the finest in the world.

The plans of the Government contemplate the hooking up of the Great Smoky and the other parks already in existence with new parks which will form a chain from Maine to Florida. Included in this string of Government parks will be the Shenandoah National Park in Virginia and the Everglades National Park in Florida.

Discussing the practical value of the national parks of the country, as illustrated by the Great Smoky Park, Dr. Wilbur says:

"Although the more beautiful areas of the country, aside from the crop of trees and plant life upon them, have comparatively little value as compared to the rich productive low lands, they do, though, have great value as watersheds. In the sharp competition of land against land that has been going on for over 100 years, they have been shown to be inferior from an agricultural standpoint. The economic values that these lands have can often be harvested only at the expense of the lowlands. There must be a great back land of hills and mountains, forests, brush-covered hills, and meadows, if we are to have flowing streams, successful industries and productive farms.

"I think it will be shown that in the Great Smoky Mountain National Park there is an economic advantage in turning lands with qualities of beauty but of little economic resource into national reservations for the recreation of our people.

"That advantage will come not only to the whole people through the use of these areas, but it has distinct local advantages, in that it makes them steady producing units, adding wealth to the surrounding community. The crop of visitors is easy to harvest. Recreation gives them health, happiness and satisfaction, and they in turn give prosperity to the park neighborhoods."

Having been without one of these great national parks, the people of this section are not yet aware of the outstanding benefits that will accrue to them with the completion of the Great Smoky. That realization will come, however, with the increasing flow of visitors each year until, as in the case of the great parks in the Far West, tens of thousands of tourists from every section of the country will find rest and recreation in the lovely valleys and among the towering mountains of this great Eastern playground.

Oh, Well, We'll Just Wait for Results.

POST HASTE.

"Begone, dull Care, thou and I shall never agree."

"Some have too much yet still do crave;
I little have, and seek no more:
They are but poor, though much they have,
And I am rich with little store:
They poor, I rich, they beg, I give;
They lack, I have; they pine, I live."

Resolved, that it would be a good thing to make a permanent arrangement of a Sunday after the day after.

The world has hardly had time to welcome the new year yet, it was so happy yesterday saying good-by to the old.

Finland's wet vote did not come in time to get the lid off for New Year's, so her celebration was probably as dry as Washington's.

Our old year depression was bad enough, but if you think it couldn't have been worse just read up on the prize panics of the '70s and '90s.

The Philippines might achieve independence by trading places with one of about fifty nations that would like to be taken under the financial wing of the United States.

Finland voted more than three to one for repeal and only 1 per cent favored l. w. and b. modification. A hard climate calls for hard licker.

Those big Manchurians who could wield a two-handed sword have discovered that a modern rifle shoots just as far for a 5-foot Jap as for a giant.

Cowards who mail bombs are even more despicable than those who endeavor to deliver them directly to intended victims.

Filled with the spirit of the New Year, undoubtedly Congress is coming back determined to finish the work of passing needed constructive measures before it plays politics.

One estimate figures it out that if 6,000,000 visitors to the Washington celebration this year spend $10 each it will put $60,000,000 in circulation here. We say they will spend $15 each; accept our contribution of $30,000,000.

"Mills working overtime." This announcement from Speaker Garner was not a prosperity note and it did not refer to the Ogden in Utah.

THE SMALL BOYS FIGHTING

I think it very wrong to fight
When little boys go out to play,
I've always said it wasn't right
For blows to spoil a happy day.
But, on the other hand, although
His mother seems to disagree,
I hate to have him take a blow
And then come crying home to me.

I don't approve of battling boys,
I hope he'll never start a fight,
But when some other lad employs
And jabs him one upon the nose,
And makes his eye a sight to see,
I find I am not one of those Who think he still should peaceful be.

I say be patient, calm and kind,
Don't let your temper spoil your fun.
Who starts a fight will some day find
The foe who will not turn and run.
But if a bully starts a bout
And hits you when you can't agree,
You stay right there and fight it out.
And don't come crying home to me.

By ROBERT QUILLEN

My dear Louise:

Since you are a normal girl, with a normal girl's standard of values, I suppose that your chief ambition is to make a good impression on young and unattached males.

Trying to give one of your sex advice on the subject may seem like teaching a duck to swim, but I can at least show you a weak spot in the enemy's line.

They aren't afraid, of course, in the sense that one is afraid of a tiger, but only as a man who prizes his dignity is afraid to play a parlor game that seems designed to make him ridiculous.

They are afraid because they don't understand girls. They wish to appear at their best, and they have an uneasy feeling that they are being judged and found wanting. They suspect girls of play-acting and feel awkward and foolish because they must play-act as well or spoil the scene.

Even a sensible and well-poised youngster, experienced enough to be sure of himself in any company, feels some apprehension when left alone with a strange girl.

She may try to seem high-brow and talk about things a regular guy wouldn't choose as topics of conversation. Maybe he knows more about them than she does, but dragging them into a conversation by the ears seems an affectation and he resents being made a party to it. He knows she is showing off and the situation seems silly. He wonders if she thinks him dumb enough to be impressed by that sort of thing.

Or, perhaps, she is stupid and gets by only because she is pretty and easy to handle. Her chatter is without meaning, her face without expression, her eyes as vacant as a doll's. Her silly pretense of interest bores him and he feels ashamed of her and of himself.

Experiences like these make him wary of all girls, but they make the way easy for a girl who is sensible and genuine.

How he expands and relaxes when he meets a girl who doesn't "put on!" How his heart warms to the girl who talks and laughs and acts as a natural girl should!

Do you know why? Because she makes him feel at ease. Because he can do his part without play-acting or feeling ridiculous. Because, in short, he can retain his self-respect and his dignity.

Regular fellers can be happy only when they can be natural, and they are grateful to a girl who makes it easy for them by leading the way. Love,

DAD.

PRO AND CON

Houston Post-Dispatch.

Hugo Black, senior senator from Alabama, who announces he will be a candidate in 1932 to succeed himself, should have little difficulty in realizing that ambition. At this distance, it would seem that, on the basis of his record, he should be readily returned to the upper house at Washington.

Black has not evolved into the national figure in politics that Oscar Underwood was. Underwood, of course, had served many years in the House, and later a number of years in the Senate, and Black is comparatively a newcomer. Underwood was regarded as one of the major political leaders of the country long before he became a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination in 1924. But Black more nearly reflects majority Alabama sentiment on numerous issues than did Underwood. Black was put into the Senate by forces out of harmony with some of Underwood's political views, notably the former senator's opposition to prohibition. Underwood did not offer for reelection, doubtless because he foresaw defeat if he ran.

A Crucial Operation.

In this matter of taxation the problem is no longer how to pluck the goose with the least squawk, but to perform a major operation on the poor bird without anesthetics and still leave him a bare chance of recovery.

Substitutes.
St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Representative Boylan, who wants to print comic strips in the Congressional Record, apparently has little hope that Senator Heflin will come back.

The Democratic Tax Alternative.
Kansas City Times.

It has been assumed, of course, that the Democrats would formulate their own tax program. But an analysis of the administration recommendations forced the conclusion that any marked variance from the plan offered by the Republicans would mean less revenue than the estimated $920,000,000 increase of the new administration rates and exemptions.

This conclusion is strengthened by the tentative plan suggested by the Democratic policy committee. This plan would not lower the present exemptions, and it would depend on the higher incomes and increased inheritance taxes and on a gift and limited excise tax for the great bulk of new revenue, which, it is admitted, would not be so much as sought by the administration.

Perhaps this modification is good politics, but it is not good statesmanship. There should be a wider spread of the taxing basis. It is both just and desirable that more should pay taxes when a great emergency exists.

Expensive Folly.
Cincinnati Enquirer.

Among the more reckless of several reckless relief plans put forward in Congress is that which proposes a Federal bond issue of $5,000,000,000 for a tremendous program of public works, with the added contingency that if the Federal Government cannot find jobs enough to do, it shall lend money to States and local governments for public spending. This scheme is being stressed strongly by congressmen who see a cure for all economic ills in the widespread squandering of public money, and who refuse to see that what goes out to the people in such expenditures comes back from the people and with interest.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Washington Post has rendered an important public service in compiling and publishing its special "Department of Commerce Edition" in commemoration of the opening for official use of what is probably the largest and certainly the most magnificent office building in the world.

It is with great pleasure that I write to you to express the appreciation of the officers and members of the Washington Chamber of Commerce for this fine contribution to the literature of the Capital City.

HARRY KING,
President, Washington Chamber of Commerce.

Reader Discusses Senator Hull's Plan to Boost Prosperity by Giving Home Market to Foreigners.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In my humble opinion, the title "boob statesmanship" would have been more appropriate for the fine editorial "Debt and Tariff," published in The Sunday Post, in which Senator Hull's plan to settle the debt question is so ably and intelligently interpreted. Your editorial shows American industry and labor just what to expect should Hull's stupid plan be adopted. Hull's idea may sound brilliant to the backwoodsmen of his State, but to well-informed business men and wage earners it sounds ridiculous. If all Democratic statesmen hold the same views as Hull, their policies would be better typified by Simple Simon as emblem of their party in place of the donkey. I also wish to commend The Post for two editorials, "Penny-Pinching" and "Farm Tariff Dividends," appearing in the Post December 25. Keep up the good work.

Maryland Protest Against Mapes Bill—Appeal to Maryland and Virginia Representatives.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The recent Mapes bill fiasco causes one to wondor what is wrong with the representatives of nearby Maryland and Virginia in Congress. And now comes all this talk of pay slashes. Common sense should tell the local representatives to vote against such legislation, but certainly there is more to representation in Congress than mere voting. At present the bulk of congressional constituents in districts adjoining Washington have to go to Iowa, New York and other far off places for active support of their interests.

Apparently our representatives do not know just where our interests lie. Come on, neighbors, let's tell Mr. Gambrill, Mr. Lewis and Mr. Smith in letters, immediately, and again later in the ballot box, if necessary.

MARYLANDER.

Says American Citizens Should Buy American-Made Goods and Thus Cause More Factories to Open.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: If everybody who buys anything would demand goods made in United States, our factories would soon start up again. There are too many foreign-made articles on the market here. I never buy them if I can get the equivalent article made in the United States.

Regardless of how lenient this country is in certain matters, I still say that the people here should buy American-made goods whenever possible and thus get our factories working on a prewar basis.

JAMES GIFFNER.

Old-Time Correspondent's Tribute to the Late "Dick" Oulahan.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The death of no Washington newspaper man could be more greatly mourned by the profession and generally by officials than that of Richard Victor Oulahan.

"Dick" Oulahan, excepting as years left their trace, was the same today as he was 40-odd years ago, when the writer worked with him on the old United Press—later the United Associated Press. He was courtly, graceful of bearing, considerate of the opinion of others on public questions, and strove to eliminate whatever personal feelings he might have had on any subject he wrote about, presenting it in an impartial and unprejudiced manner. This was one reason for his popularity among his fellow craftsmen as well as among officials generally.

He has often said to the writer: "I am a reporter of news, not an editor. News is what I want. Let the other fellow write the editorials." He lived up to that principle to the end of his life. While he had his convictions on public questions, many of which he shared with the writer on economic issues, he never permitted his personal opinions to influence his reports.

Looking back over the past two score years, one can count on one's fingers the men now living who tramped old Newspaper Row in those days. Among them there come to mind John Boyle, Alfred Clarke, Alfred J. Stofer, Victor Kauffmann, Charles P. Hunt, Henry L. West, Winfield Larner, Charles A. Hamilton, Charles H. Merillat and the writer.

THERE'S AN ARTIST.

In Kansas City a musician, whose car was crushed between two sections of a freight train, was pulled from the wreck with all his bones, even his trombone, intact, according to the Houston Post-Dispatch. "Is my trombone all right?" was his first question to his rescuers. A true artist.

TEXAS STATE LIB... Austin, Texas

SOCIETY

QUITE the largest of the diplomatic breakfasts ever given on the New Year Day was that yesterday of the Secretary of State and Mrs. Stimson in the Pan-American Building. Nearly all the members of the Diplomatic Corps at this post and their families were in the company, with scores of officials, Army and Navy officers and their families, and many members of resident society, probably more than have ever before been guests at this function.

A section of the Marine Band played in the patio, their red coats making a picturesque scene, along with the tall branches of tropical plants and evergreens in the boughs of which tropical birds and parrots are always perched. The great Hall of the Americas, where the buffet breakfast was served, was barren of decorations save huge poinsettia blossoms with very long stems, placed in tall vases on the tables, one across each end of the hall and a long one down the west side of the room, while small tables were placed in other available spots. The red blossoms gave a beautiful touch of color to the handsome hall.

The picturesque atmosphere of this annual function was missing, as it has been for several years, as the ambassadors and ministers, almost all of them, rush to their homes after being received by the President and First Lady in the White House, and remove their brilliant uniforms and court costumes appearing at the function of the Secretary of State and his wife, in somber civilian clothes. The naval and military aids of embassies and legations, however, are usually in their uniforms, along with scores of the American high officers, giving color to the party.

Vice President Curtis and Mrs. Gann Arrive.

The Vice President and Mr. and Mrs. Gann were among the first to arrive. They were greeted by the director general of the Pan American Union, Dr. Leo S. Rowe, as in fact all other guests were, at the front door.

He escorted the distinguished guests to the elevator which took them to the main floor. Mrs. Gann was in a gown of black velvet with a black hat with a small brim, smartly tilted to a becoming angle, with sables and a great bunch of beautiful orchids as a corsage ornament.

Secretary and Mrs. Stimson stood at the head of the grand staircase on the north side of the building, and the presentations were made to the Secretary by Mr. Charles Lee Cooke, of the State Department, who has been doing these presentations through many administrations. Mrs. Stimson was in a gown of garnet velvet, the skirt made in the new flaring fashion, with a bodice of garnet brocaded thickly and heavily in gold. She wore a garnet hat with a small brim turned up slightly on one side.

Among the members of the Cabinet attending were the Secretary of War and Mrs. Hurley, the latter in a gown of brown, light-wool crepe, with little circles woven in in a lighter tone, and a small brown hat with a touch of white; the Attorney General and Mrs. Mitchell, the latter in black velvet with bands of ermine on the collar and cuffs, and a black hat with a brim, and ostrich plumes; the Postmaster General and Mrs. Brown, the latter wearing a gown of Mrs. Brown's favorite light green and black, with bands of black velvet on the green bodice, and a small black hat, about her neck a chain with a gorgeous ornament of green jade.

There were there also the Secretary of the Interior and Mrs. Wilbur, the latter in dark green chiffon embossed heavily with velvet in a darker shade, and a hat of the same shades of green, with a becoming brim; the Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Lamont, the latter in a black frock with long black coat with deep collar and cuffs of black lynx, and a black hat with turned-down brim, and the Secretary of Labor and Mrs. Doak, the latter wearing a gown of brown velvet with lace at the neck, and a small turban of the brown velvet.

Donna de Martino in Striking Gown.

The dean of the Diplomatic Corps, Nobile Giacomo de Martino and Donna Antonietta, arrived with the members of their staff, the latter looking even more striking than usual in a costume of black velvet with a long coat of the same material, heavily trimmed with dark fur. Her smart hat was also of black and had for its only ornament a spray of aigrettes.

The Cuban Ambassador and Senora de Ferrara were missed from the group of diplomats, owing to their absence in Cuba, but the embassy was represented by the other members of the staff.

The French Ambassador and Mme. Claudel held their usual little reception, greeting their many friends. Mme. Claudel wore an ensemble of seal brown velvet with a long scarf collar, and a turban entirely made of tiny velvet flowers of pale aquamarine blue and seal brown. Pretty Mlle. Reine Claudel was in a costume of marine blue most becoming to her blondeness, with a coat of the same shade trimmed with natural lynx.

Mme. Thenault, wife of the Air Attache of the Embassy, Maj. George Thenault, wore brown and white with white crepe trimmings, and a small brown hat.

Mme. Debuchi Attired in Black Velvet.

Petite Mme. Debuchi, and her husband, the Japanese Ambassador, were seen here and there, the former wearing a gown of black velvet trimmed with handsome lace, a small black hat of velvet, and a scarf of chinchilla fur.

The Polish Ambassador, Mr. Tytus Filipowicz, and the members of his staff were there, and many greeted the Second Secretary and Mme. Massalska, who have just returned to Washington after several months absence in Poland.

The Belgian Ambassador and Mme. May were present, the latter wearing a gown of black satin with white accents, and a smart black hat.

The British Embassy was represented by its tall Ambassador, Sir Ronald Lindsay. The Military and Naval Attaches in their brilliant uniforms, and the ladies of the staff in smart costumes.

Mrs. Terence Shone, wife of the First Secretary, wore a simple costume of black, and Mrs. C. J. W. Torr, wife of the Second Secretary, was in brown.

Mrs. Harold H. Sims, wife of the Attache of the Embassy, wore a smart costume of navy blue with a small hat of blue turned back from the face.

Mrs. Leander McCormick-Goodhart, wife of the Commercial Secretary, was in a gown of soft blue velvet embroidered in metal thread motifs, and a turban of the same material.

Brazilian Ambassador Attends First Breakfast.

The Brazilian Ambassador and Mme. Lima e Silva were among the several chiefs of mission who attended for the first time the New Year's breakfast of the Secretary and Mrs. Stimson. Mme. de Lima e Silva wore a costume of brown cloth with a large scarf of sables and a small brown hat.

The Minister of the Netherlands, Mr. J. H. van Royen, also was accompanied by the members of his staff, including the Counselor of the Legation, Mr. L. G. van Hoorn, who returned to Washington just two days ago after an absence of two months in Europe.

The Norwegian Minister and Mme. Bachke, among the most attractive and popular of the Diplomatic Corps, the latter wearing a black gown trimmed with white, and a black turban.

Mme. Veverka, wife of the Czechoslovakian Minister, was striking in a gown of black velvet fashioned on long lines and trimmed with bands of ermine. With it she wore a wide-brimmed black hat.

Senora de Sacasa in King's Blue Crepe.

The Minister of Nicaragua and Senora de Sacasa were accompanied by their daughter, Senorita Maria Sacasa. Senora de Sacasa was in a gown of king's blue crepe with a hat to match, and her daughter was in black satin.

Others seen at the gay gathering were the Chief of Staff, Gen. Douglas MacArthur; the Secretary to the President and Mrs. Walter Newton and their daughter, Miss Grace Newton; the Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Wilbur J. Carr, the latter wearing a gown of brown velvet with a hat to match; the Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Francis White; Mr. Theodore Marriner, Mr. Robert Kelly, Mr. and Mrs. David E. Finley, Mr. Robert Hengstler and his mother, Mrs. Hengstler; Mr. and Mrs. Whitla Stinson, Mr. Miles Shand, Mr. and Mrs. James Clement Dunn, Mr. and Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins, the latter wearing a gown of black velvet with a wide-brimmed velvet hat; the Surgeon General of the Public Health Service and Mrs. Hugh S. Cumming, and their son, Mr. Hugh S. Cumming jr.; Senator and Mrs. James J. Davis and their guest, Miss Gretchen Heyd of Canada.

Also the Assistant Secretary of War and Mrs. Frederick H. Payne, the Commandant of the Army War College and Mrs. William D. Connor, Brig. Gen. William E. Horton, the Chief of Naval Operations and Mrs. William V. Pratt, the latter wearing a gown of printed velvet in shades of blue rose and gray, with a small blue straw hat; Rear Admiral and Mrs. Mark L. Bristol, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Merritte W. Ireland, the Assistant Secretary of Commerce for Aeronautics, Col. Clarence M. Young; Senator William E. Borah, Senator and Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, Senator and Mrs. Hugo Black, Miss Mabel Boardman, Mrs. Sydney Cloman, Mrs. Campbell Prichett.

Included in the group were Mrs. Harry Knowles, of New York; Miss Toby Bryan and Miss Louise McAdams, of Richmond; Miss Cecil Dulin, of Danville, Ky., and Miss Eleanor McCormick and Miss Helen McCormick, of Chicago, who received with Miss McCormick-Goodhart at the ball. The debutante wore an attractive frock of pale yellow satin, and a corsage bouquet of yellow roses and green orchids.

The spacious reception rooms were decorated in Christmas greens, silver, red and green forming the color scheme. Langley Park is one of the most charming country estates in Maryland, and the residence built there after a disastrous fire a few years ago is copied after Langley Park, the ancestral estate of the late Frederick E. McCormick-Goodhart, in England. Last night there was illumination from the entrance of the estate along the driveway to the house, and the mansion itself was in a blaze of light.

Several small and informal dinners preceded the ball, among them one given by Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Bell Sweeney.

the post, but he could have remained in the service in another capacity.

Failure of the Government "to complete the five-year aviation plan and inaugurate another to bring our military plane strength up to roughly 3,600 machines for all types" was deplored by Gen. Fechet, who considered the present Army force of about 1,700 machines "woefully inadequate."

He made it clear he was not criticizing the administration for its aviation policies, adding:

"Were I to remain in the Air Corps, my rank and experience would insure me an important place and interesting work for the next ten years and indirectly an opportunity to help aviation, but only in its governmental aspects.

"It would not enable me to help the industry as a whole. This I feel I must do.

"I go in sorrow at the state of our armed forces, in sadness at the attitude of my country toward its defenders and because of the false sense of security my people seem to feel.

Issues Farewell Warning.

"I want my farewell act to be this word of warning. We are the most hated Nation in the world; we house more than our share of the world's treasure. That treasure is now practically unprotected.

"Unless we do a hasty about-face, unless there is immediately a national consciousness of impending trouble, with ample preparation to meet it, our fool's paradise will soon be lost.

"I am not interested in the industry as a business, but it must succeed commercially if it is to be an asset of national defense, and without such an asset we shall have no national defense. * * *

"I wish to serve all of those interested in aviation, for in their development and success lie the very core of our national defense and the cure for our totally inadequate preparedness."

Maj. Gen. Benjamin D. Foulois, the Army's first pilot, succeeded him yesterday as chief of the corps.

Rockefeller Dime Gifts Show Confidence in '32

Weather Promise Kept After 54 Years' Waiting

Ashland, Wis., Jan. 1 (A.P.).—Undaunted by snow flurries, whipped by a strong east wind, 50 Bayfield and Washburn citizens crossed Chequamegon Bay on Lake Superior to Ashland today in two small yachts to carry out a promise made 54 years ago.

In 1878 a contingent of Ashland citizens journeyed to Bayfield on the tug Wadsworth on New Year's Day, because for the first time in the history of the white men the harbor was clear of ice. Bayfield was so enthusiastic over the visit that a promise was made to reciprocate as soon as the bay was open on New Year's Day. It wasn't until today that the promise could be fulfilled.

Coxey Assumes Helm As Ohio Town's Mayor

Massillon, Ohio, Jan. 1 (A.P.).—A gray-haired, time-bitten old warrior, who earned the sobriquet of "General" as leader of the famous march of the unemployed to Washington in 1894, today stood on the threshold of realization of a "dream" 38 years old.

Jacob S. Coxey, whose plan of issuing money at cost to aid the unemployed came to him in his sleep, was inaugurated as mayor of Massillon, his first public office. The "General" took the oath of office in City Hall Auditorium before hundreds of Massillon citizens, his eyes flashed behind old-fashioned spectacles as he swore to uphold the Constitution of the United States.

Noted Doctor's Records Are Burned Under Will

Philadelphia, Jan. 1 (A.P.).—The private case records of patients of the late Dr. Francis X. Dercum, including President Woodrow Wilson and other noted persons whom he treated, have been destroyed under directions left in his will, it was learned today.

The records were burned by Dr. Dercum's widow, Mrs. Elizabeth Comly Dercum, who explained that it was her husband's opinion that they were of so confidential a nature that they should not be permitted to be seen, even by other physicians.

DIAL FLASHES

By ROBERT D. HEINL

A GREAT voice was silenced by the death of Richard V. Oulahan, Washington correspondent of the New York Times. Mr. Oulahan was a polished speaker, and at Gridiron dinners proved himself an accomplished actor. Also had he desired to do so, he could have become as famous a radio commentator as he was a writer.

One of his few radio appearances was at the Press Club reception the night of Lindbergh's return. Mr. Oulahan read a poem written for the occasion by Charles Michelson, now with the Democratic national committee.

He was nervous at the thought of facing a microphone for the first time. Another speaker, Louis Ludlow, then president of the Press Club, and now a member of Congress from Indiana, was likewise apprehensive. Both sought advice as to how to approach their tasks when along came two famous radio announcers, Milton J. Cross and Graham McNamee. Cross gave Ludlow some instructions. MacNamee reassured Oulahan.

"It is the easiest thing in the world," MacNamee said. "Forget the microphone and talk exactly as you would over a telephone."

Mr. Oulahan, as always, acquitted himself magnificently, and, much to his surprise, was showered with telegrams and letters from all parts of the country.

CALEB O'CONNOR, former Washingtonian, now with the National Broadcasting Co., in New York, was here for a short breathing speell during the holidays. Mr. O'Connor has an important position in the production department of the NBC, and is associated with Miss Bertha Brainard, program manager.

Tuning in on different parts of the country New Year's Eve the radio again gave ample evidence of the lack of enforcement of the national prohibition act. This was especially apparent after the midnight observance had passed and the celebration dragged on into the early morning hours.

ALL those who have from time to time tried to figure out which parts Amos played and which were played by Andy during the "murder trial" will be interested to know that Amos played the King Fish, Lightning, Ruby Taylor's father, Brother Crawford, Jack Dixon, Assistant District Attorney, one of the bailiffs, Court Clerk, Coroner and the man from the Ballistics Department. Andy portrayed the Landlord, the hardboiled policeman, the Whale, the Swordfish, the Judge, Amos' lawyer, and two of the bailiffs.

Following is the Lucky Strike dance hour schedule for the next two weeks:

January 5, Wayne King; Jan. 7, Coon-Sanders; Jan. 9, Duke Ellington, Lew Conrad; Jan. 12, Jack Denny; Jan. 14, Rome or Berlin; and Jan. 16, Jimmy Grier.

THE series of short educational talks on the eyes, which are being sponsored by the District of Columbia Optometric Association, are proving an interesting feature offered by Station WMAL each Saturday night at 9 o'clock. Dr. Lewis H. Kraskin will speak tonight on the subject: "If You Value Your Eyes Take Care of Them."

Dr. Kraskin, who holds the honorary degree of doctor of ocular science, is an officer and director of the local optometric society of which he was one of the organizers and a former president.

The first act of Wagner's "Die Meistersinger" will be presented over the WJZ network at 9 o'clock tonight by the Chicago Civic Opera Company. It is one of the weekly Chicago operatic broadcasts.

THE Merry Madcaps, directed by Norman Cloutier, the second sustaining feature of Station WTIC, Hartford, Conn., to be presented over the WEAF network, including WRC, will combine with the Christiaan Kriens concert orchestra to offer an hour's "Pop concert" this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Soloists will be Sally Ayres and Fred Wade known to the Connecticut audiences as the "Songland Girl and Boy," and the Three Mad Hatters, a vocal trio.

A romantic adventure of buried treasure, "Spanish Gold," will be presented during the First Nighter broadcast over WJZ at 9:30 o'clock tonight. The drama will feature June Meredith, Don Ameche and Cliff Soubier.

Sibyl Baker, director of playgrounds of the District of Columbia, and prominent in local dramatic circles, will be Peggy Clarke's guest speaker over WJSV at 10 o'clock this morning.

THE youthful president of the University of Chicago, Robert M. Hutchins, will deliver an address on "Psychology" during the National Advisory Council on Radio in Education program tonight (WRC, 8:30 o'clock). Other speakers will be Walter B. Bingham and Felix Morley.

Emory Daugherty and his Tom Tom Boys will be presented by Station WRC four or five nights weekly. Daugherty wrote "A College Sweetheart," popular number of the day.

"The Hoosier Editor," in the person of Frederick Landis, will be presented by WMAL as a network feature, beginning January 9. Mr. Landis is a former congressman and a brother of Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis.

FROM the Albany Knickerbocker-Press:

"Floyd Gibbons has gone to the scene of the warfare in the East. If you read that the Japs or Chinese are using machine guns don't believe it. It will be Floyd Gibbons talking."

Dare Interprets the Mode

WELL, now that Christmas and even New Year are over and we're hoping that you promised yourself to be just the loviest lady on earth—our fancies must turn, and none too lightly, to artistic personal decorations. Artistic and economical ones, of course.

So we count all our pennies, all those that are left from Christmas giving, and maybe include some cash gifts that someone thought it exepdient to give us, and then what do we do? Well, we hie outselves down to the gorgeous January sales in our favorite department store, and we hie ourselves over to the remnant counter, and we spend the most blissful morning doing nothing in the world but spending all our pennies for remnants! Oh no! Not extravagantly, of course, but with definite things in mind that we need or will need and can make and put away for gifts—hankies, blouses—oh just hundreds of little things that all women adore and never have enough of!

Now, of course, the average woman says she hasn't the time to make all these things. And, of course, she is right—because the average woman hasn't, because she hasn't taken the time or made the time for "leisure for loveliness."

So, if you are an average woman, don't take time for loveliness and see how far that gets you. But if you aren't then just look around and watch and count up all the little minutes in a day that you waste doing nothing at all, minutes which could be spent in busy finger work, making up really lovely and artistic things that go to help to make your life and your feelings and your spirit beautiful.

All those times you sit and chat with a friend, for instance, or that hour you spend on the bus or the subway every morning and every night going to work. Just think it over atnd you'll find lots and lots of spare finger time which you can use for making loveliness!

* * * *

But, of course, you can make ugly things, too, in your spare finger time, if you don't use good taste and a bit of brains and a bit of planning! So to avoid wasting any time, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Dare Department of The Washington Post for this week's illustrated leaflet, which gives you exact directions for making useful and lovely things in your spare time out of remnants. This is remnant month, remember, and every time is spare finger time, so on with the request for leaflets!

* * * *

I simply must describe something awfully practical in the way of a combination dress that I saw recently, because you might like to make it yourself for the kiddies. Picture a separate skirt, belted at the normal waistline, and well made, and a top with coat-like sleeves, I mean just wider than a sleeve of a dress would be, but no wider than the sleeve of a jacket would be: the top with wide reveres in the front, and a tiny belt which ties the jacket-like blouse top to one side. Voila, a one-piece dress! Now, to make a suit of it, wear blouses of sweaters or even gilets with it, and button back the reveres—and you have a suit. The material is wool, and the top is unlined, and, of course, then, one wears the skirt alone with various sweater tops, and one making an idea go a long way, if you ask me.

* * * *

And if you hurry with the envelope for this new leaflet, you might be able to get the leaflet telling you how to make dainty boudoir things, for they, too, are made ever so nicely from remnants. That was the last leaflet, you know, and there are a few of them left.

Culbertson on Contract

by Ely Culbertson

World's Champion Player and Greatest Card Analyst

A-202.

An Inefficient System.

It has long been my contention that bad systems are at the root of losses at the Bridge table and it is only my conviction that the so-called Official System of Contract bidding is inefficient that caused me to engage in my match with Mr. Sidney S. Lenz, which through 150 rubbers will disclose the merits of that system in comparison with the Approach-Forcing System of Contract bidding. The inefficiency of the Official System was demonstrated particularly in connection with Slam bidding very early in the match. A number of Slams were made which, under the Approach-Forcing System, would have presented no difficulties in the bidding, but were not bid by our opponents, Messrs. Lenz and Jacoby, not because they were not good players, but because their system did not function effectively. Take for example the second hand of the tenth rubber.

West, Dealer.

	Mr. Lenz

	Mr. Jacoby ♠ Q 5 ♡ A K 7 6 5 3 ◇ A 10 8 ♣ 9 5

1—Mr. Lenz chooses the correct bid. A longer suit should always be bid in preference to a shorter biddable suit.

2—Thus far the bidding follows the principles of the Approach-Forcing System. Mr. Jacoby's hand fully justifies a Forcing Takeout.

3—Also in accord with the Approach-Forcing principles. After a Forcing bid or a Forcing Takeout has been made, both partners should keep the bidding low, so that all information may be exchanged at as low a range of bidding as possible.

4—This bid also is correct. The extra length in the heart suit is shown.

5—An inadequate bid. Queen-two is entirely adequate support for a rebiddable trump suit. Mr. Lenz's partner had made a Forcing Takeout. He had also shown a suit strong enough to rebid, which certainly indicated not less than a five-card length with probably Ace King Knave Ten at the top, or a six-card length with slightly weaker top cards. Mr. Lenz held 4 honor-tricks plus, as well as quite favorable distribution. He should have bid at least five hearts and could not have been condemned for bidding six.

In the play, seven hearts were actually made. Having an absolutely trickless hand, I opened the seven of diamonds, but no lead would have defeated a six contract. Of course, there is too much strength in my partner's hand to justify a Grand Slam bid by North and South.

Today's Pointer.

What Today Means to You

"CAPRICORN."

IF January 2 is your birthday the best hours for you on this date are from 11:15 a. m. to 1 p. m., from 4 p. m. to 5:30 p. m. and from 10:30 p. m. to 11:40 p. m. The danger periods are from 8 a. m. to 9:35 a. m. and from 7 p. m. to 8:45 p m

January 2 should be a particularly good day for the "stay-at-homes," and new interests should be brought to their door—it may be in the form of a friend or important missive by post. Those in the shop or office will find the day uninspiring and unfruitful.

Children born on this January 2 will have intense natures, vivid personalities and dynamic energies. They will be fond of gayety and social life and will not take to work seriously. They will long for travel and adventure and will not settle down until they have had some of each.

Born on January 2, you look on life as a game and you play fair. Your chief character assets are cheerfulness, determination, ambition, moral and mental courage, sincerity and self-confidence. You live each moment and wish the days were longer so that you could accomplish more. With your mental force and physical energy you mop up your work with seemingly little effort. You are a doer, but not a drudge. You know how to bring dignity to any labor. Difficulties to you are a spur to increased endeavor.

Your principal weaknesses are a rather exaggerated self-importance, impatience, hypercriticism and extravagance. Your conversation is pretty well autobiographical. If you have successes you prance at the head of your own brass band. Being a "do-it-now" sort of person, you hate to await the natural and necessary development of circumstances, and you often hit the nail on the head, for this very reason, before the iron is hot. No matter how great an earner you may be, you will always be a greater spender. You like to be in the swim of things, and appearances mean a great deal to you.

If you be a woman you will be a home-builder and home-keeper. You are also interested in communal or club work. Your surroundings and dress express your individuality.

M. Cary Thomas, president of Bryn Mawr College.

FRANCES M'DONALD

HUSBAND OR DOCTOR?

DEAR FRANCES McDONALD: Will you please answer this letter and advise me? I have great faith in your advice. Twelve years ago I married a man I did not love. I was only 17 at the time. Had just finished high school. I did not want to marry at all and Tom (my husband) was the last person I would have ever thought of, but my father and mother talked me into it. My father's business was very bad at the time and Tom had money. I told father and mother I did not love him and they both said I would love him after I married him. Father raved and mother cried. Mother said I should by all means marry Tom if only to help father. So at last I gave in. I will never forget my wedding day. I cried all morning long and thought if I could only run away. Well, I have been married twelve years and am still waiting to fall in love with Tom. But I have been faithful to him. We have two children. About three months ago I was ill and went to a doctor a friend of mine said was very good. The first day I walked into his office something went through me like a shot. After I had been to him three times I knew I loved him like nothing on earth. He is not as young or good looking as my husband nor has he as much money, but I love him. About a week ago I finished the treatments his nurse was giving me and I went into his office to say good-by. It was then he told me he loved me from the minute I put my foot in his office. He, of course, is unmarried. He said he loved and honored me far too much to have any back street affair with me, but he said if I were only free he would be waiting for me—I have not been happy with Tom. The only bright spot in my life are my children. Tom has been good to me up to a certain point, but he has always thought of himself first. Would it be wrong of me if I take the children and divorce Tom and marry this man? I think I have a right to this happiness, as I was forced into my first marriage. Then again, I feel I would be doing a wrong. Please answer this letter and tell me what to do. UNDECIDED.

Well, we are for Tom. The medical man does not sound like much of a man, much less a husband. Where were honor and ethics parked while he was making your last trip to his office memorable? We are exceptionally broad-minded in the matter of matrimonial mistakes, misfits and misery in general, but we just can not seem to work up a temperature over the doctor who makes love to his patients by the way of increasing his practice among restless and dissatisfied wives.

If this man loved you he would never have followed the course that he did. Real men do not spill over in this fashion, upsetting a woman's whole world, and then telling her that, of course, they can wait until she is free! If they can wait so patiently how about a bit of patience in the beginning? The truth is that your doctor finds it helpful to his practice and no doubt also to his patients, to inject a bit of excitement into the routine of professional service. And women being intuitively wise, in most cases take the excitement along with the other doses, and do not confuse it with the real love that surrounds them in their homes.

The real trouble with your love life is that from the start you were convinced that Tom was not the man. Left to yourself you might, when you were 25 have picked him voluntarily. You might even have loved him completely. But you were forced while you were still adolescent. And you have been unable to overcome the repugnance and resentment engendered by the violence to your spiritual and emotonal well-being. But after twelve years you have no complaint against Tom! How many women who married for love can match that record? He is selfish. And there his faults end! Would that man's selfishness were his worst fault!

My dear, as we see it, you have a first-rate husband and a third-rate doctor. And we can not help wondering what your story would be after twelve years of marriage with a medico who included love-making as part of his professional services to all comers. Better cling to Tom!

that city, was another bomb, the second sent to Chicago by express. Officers set off the bomb in a stone quarry and reported that the explosion was strong enough to wreck a large city building.

The combined home and grocery store of R. Dionisio, an Italian living in Trinidad, Colo., was destroyed by an explosion, believed to have been caused by a bomb, early Friday. The family was not at home and no motive was apparent.

In the rear of a Cincinnati commission merchant's house, eight sticks of dynamite, a fuse and two batteries were found. The authorities thought, however, that they had been hidden by a gang of safeblowers.

To take care of these ardent collectors, Mr. Mooney said last night that he would reopen the windows again today and cancel the stamps as of January 1.

More than 2,500 collectors were in line at the twelve windows when they opened yesterday morning. Most of these followed the procedure of mailing letters to themselves in order to get the cancellations. Some sent out twelve letters bearing the entire series from ½ cent up to 10 cents, while others placed the entire block on a single letter.

With Mr. Mooney acting as salesman, the first stamps of the issue were sold to Senator Fess, of Ohio, chairman of the Bicentennial Commission. Then Representative Sol Bloom, associate director of the commission, bought a complete set.

The stamps were placed on sale under a special order of the Postmaster General. It is estimated 14,000,000,000 will be issued during the bicentennial year.

CHINCHOW IS SEIZED BY JAPANESE ARMY

It was in that year that the Chinese emperor and his consort, who later became the great Dowager Empress Tsuhsi, took refuge from the British and French troops that had occupied Peiping and had burned the famous summer palace.

The Japanese, actual masters of Manchuria since the occupation of Mukden September 18, set the final seal to their mastery today with the invasion of the suburbs of Chinchow. There now exists in Manchuria no Chinese authority capable of contesting Japan's mastery of a territory equaling in area all of the United States eastward of the Mississippi River and with a population of 30,000,000 equaling the population of the United States westward of the Mississippi.

Chinese Regime Inaugurated.

Tokyo, Jan. 1 (A.P.).—A Rengo (Japanese) news agency dispatch from Harbin today said Chang Chin-Chui, comander-in-chief of the special Harbin district, had proclaimed the independence of Heilungkiang province with himself as chairman of the provisional government.

In a circular telegram, the report said, he announces his intention to cooperate closely with the new provincial governments at Mukden and Kirin.

Nanking, China, Jan. 1 (A.P.).—The new national government, headed by Lin Sen and made up largely of appointees from the Cantonese faction, was formally inaugurated today.

It was the simplest of ceremonies and the customary New Year's military parade and official receptions were omitted.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. W. A. EVANS

To the limit of space questions pertaining to hygiene and prevention of disease will be answered in this column. Personal replies will be made to inquiries, under proper limitations when return stamped envelope is inclosed. Dr. Evans will not make diagnosis or prescribe for individual disease.

THE POOR APPETITE CHILD.

FINICKY appetite is a cause for worry. Parents expect children to play hard and, in consequence, to be ready for three square meals a day and a jot of nibbling thrown in extra. This is the regular program. When a child operates on another schedule the parents know something is wrong and, knowing neither what it means nor what to do about it, they worry.

Nor is it easy to know what is wrong, since poor appetite is not more than a warning that something is wrong, and one that does not suggest what, or where, the trouble is, or what should be done about it.

Kugelmass and Samuel offer this suggestion for something to try by way of experimentation. Their suggestion is simple and harmless and can safely be tried while the probing for a cause is being done. The plan consists in putting the child on a diet of raw basic foods. For breakfast the child gets fruit juice, milk, banana, and nothing else. Dinner consists of fruit juice, milk, vegetables, such as lettuce, tomatoes and celery, and fruits such as cantaloupe and pineapple. Supper consists of fruit juice, milk, lettuce, bananas, peaches, oranges and apples.

There is a slight element of risk in eating any raw food. To obviate this the fruits should be thoroughly washed and carefully peeled. The vegetables should be washed with scrupulous care. They should then be well chilled, served attractively, and seasoned according to the child's wishes. Pasteurized milk can be counted as raw milk for this purpose.

Nothing is to be eaten betwen meals. If the child becomes overinsistent, give some fruit juice. This plan should be carried out for one week, though in some cases it may be carried on for another one. It is not much more than a form of modified fasting, in which alkali producing fruits and vegetables are given to prevent hunger acidosis, and in which milk takes the edge off the fast. While, theoretically, it is aimed at acidosis as a cause of some cases of finicky appetite, I am not sure it is anything more than psychic and behavior treatment. A child that has been on a diet of this kind for a week is likely to appreciate food.

Of course, there are types of poor appetite that this plan will not help.

GALL BLADDER AND LIVER.

Mrs. B. writes: I have gall bladder trouble, but X-rays do not show stones. I also have trouble with my stomach and an ache in the back below the right shoulder at times. I can not have fats of any kind, and try to eat without seasoning of any kind, but often I have a spell with gas and distress.

1. Can gall bladder trouble be cured by diet and medicine, or is an operation necessary?

2. Can the liver do the work without the gall bladder?

REPLY.

1. Some cases are cured without operation. What was known as dyspepsia, acid stomach and indigestion in the old days is now loosely called gall bladder trouble, and many such cases got well without operation. Careful living, especially careful eating, causes many people to get along reasonably comfortable.

2. Yes. The gall bladder concentrates bile, stores bile, and probably secretes cholesterin, and beyond that it does not have much to do.

Indoor—Outdoor Gardens

By JANE LESLIE KIFT

ANSWER TO INQUIRIES.

PLEASE tell me why the tips of the leaves of so many of my house plants dry. I give all my plants plenty of sunshine and the tips are never touched. I had a most beautiful fern, but now it has dead leaves near its roots. Is this because it is entering a rest period? The plant gets the morning sun in its present location. JESSIE H. P.

It it not natural for any plant to become dry on the end of the shoots. The aspidistra should be thoroughly watered every day. Spray the foliage whenever you apply water to the roots. Try keeping the plant in a little less-exposed place. Keep your fern well watered and about once a week loosen the soil about its roots. Sprinkle its foliage every day and once a week go over the plant and remove all dead fronds. If you detect a number of loose runners coming up through the soil about the base of the plant, it likely requires more root room. In that case, shift it into a larger pot. Florists usually divide a fern when repotting it.

Please tell me if there is any advantage to be gained by watering geraniums with warm water?

MRS. GEORGE F. T.

No. Never water any house plants with other than cold water.

Please tell me whether it is possible to grow a privet hedge from cuttings. If so, when should the work be started? ELSIE H. T.

Yes. Start the cuttings whenever you find it convenient, except, of course, when the shrub is in a dormant state.

I want to make a small rose bed next season. This I hope to be the beginning of a rose garden. As I must do most of the work myself, I must feel my way along. Mistakes are expensive and must be as few as possible. Please tell me how wide you think I should make the first bed, which will be only twenty feet long. MRS. PHILLIP C. G.

A rose bed should be at least three feet wide. This will in a measure prevent the intrusion of grass roots. The bed should not be more than five feet wide for convenience in picking and cultivating. Be sure to prepare your ground well. Dig deep and use plenty of well-rotted manure or bonemeal.

I sowed the seeds of some hollyhocks as they ripened. Later I transplanted the seedlings to a cold-frame. They were doing well up until frost. Will they winter well in this location? When shall I transplant them to some permanent place in my garden HELEN F. T.

You have given the seedlings the proper treatment. They will likely carry through the winter in splendid condition. Trasplant them as early in the spring as the ground can be worked.

Please tell me whether cockscomb is an annual and how it is propagated. PAUL H. Y.

Cockscomb is an annual, usually grown from seed sown in the open ground in early May. The seedlings may be transplanted at any time after they have attained such a height that they can be easily handled.

BARNEY & COMPANY OPENS OFFICE HERE

By THOMAS M. CAHILL.

Of outstanding importance in local financial news was the announcement yesterday that Charles D. Barney & Co., members of the New York Stock Exchange, will open offices here today in the Securities Building, at 1329 Fifteenth street northwest, under the management of Frank P. Morse.

This newcomer to the Washington financial district is an old, strongly entrenched New York and Philadelphia house. It was founded in 1873 to take over the business of Jay Cooke & Co., the firm that financed the American Government throughout the Civil War. The original partners were Charles D. Barney, a key man in the older house, and Jay Cooke, jr., son of the famous Jay Cooke. It is an interesting fact that the present firm includes a grandson of Charles D. Barney and two great grandsons of Jay Cooke.

The original firm of Charles D. Barney & Co. began business in Philadelphia 59 years ago on a very modest scale. Total assets were a seat on the Philadelphia Stock Exchange and a capital of $2,000. Twenty-nine years later, in 1902, a New York office was opened and soon overshadowed the parent organization in Philadelphia. During the early days of the present century, Charles D. Barney & Co., of New York, took a dominant position in Wall street activities and numbered among its more active clients E. H. Harriman, William Rockefeller, Henry Clay Frick, Daniel Gray Reid and other financial giants of a quarter of a century ago.

Scope of Business.

The Charles D. Barney & Co. activities embrace a general commission business in stocks and bonds, extensive wire connections and both underwritnig and investments. The firm's well-rounded organization includes a most active stock department, a bond trading department, an investment counsel department and a well-known market analyst, James F. Hughes.

The firm in the last 30 years has been closely identified, through financing or otherwise, with the Cerro de Pasco Copper Corporation, the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., Continental Can Co., Inc., the American Ice Co., the General Cable Corporation, Sharp & Dohme, Inc., General American Tank Car Corporation, the U. S. Industrial Alcohol Co. and many other outstanding American industrials.

Although Charles D. Barney & Co. have long had private wires passing through Washington and maintain active connections in Baltimore, Richmond and Winston-Salem, as well as in Denver, St. Louis, Chicago and Philadelphia, the opening of their Fifteenth street offices today establishes their first direct contact with the National Capital since 1873. Seventy years ago, however, the original house of Jay Cooke & Co. played a vitally important role in the financial history of this city.

Barney Lives in Philadelphia.

Charles D. Barney, founder of the present firm, although retired from business activities since 1907, is still living in Philadelphia. His son-in-law, J. Horace Harding, who succeeded him as senior partner, retired in 1918, but remained a limited partner until his death in 1929. He was chairman of the board of the American Railway Express Co. and a director of the Irving Trust Co., the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Co., the Southern Pacific Co., the Western Union Telegraph Co., the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railway Co. and many other important corporations.

The present senior partner is John W. Hanes, a Yale graduate and a son of a founder of the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. Mr. Hanes is a director of the Bankers Trust Co. and the International Mercantile Marine Co. The other New York partners are J. Ford Johnson, jr., also a Yale man; Edwin A. Fish, a Williams graduate who, with W. Edwin Williams, is in charge of the investment department; Charles B. Harding, who holds the firm's seat on the New York Stock Exchange; John W. Castles, a Yale graduate and former member of the law firm of Lord, Day & Lord; F. E. Koechlein and W. J. Woods, office managers, and Joseph P. McCormac, in charge of firm wires and branch offices.

The Philadelphia partners are Philemon Dickinson, George Willing, Jay Cooke 4th, and Ivan C. Flitcraft. Mr. Dickinson and Mr. Cooke are Princeton men. With the exception of Mr. Castles and Mr. Willing, all the present partners had, prior to their admission to the firm, served many years as employes in various capacities.

Morse Widely Experienced.

SECURITY DROP LAID TO CURBS ON CREDIT

Reserve Bank Review Cites Heavy Cuts in Loans and Deposits.

New York, Jan. 1 (A.P.).—The fall in security prices during the latter part of 1931 is attributed, partly, in the monthly review of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, to an unusually heavy reduction of bank credit.

In the second week of December, the review points out, the total loans and investments of weekly reporting member banks of the Federal Reserve System declined to a volume of $2,500,000,000 smaller than a year previous, and the deposits of these banks showed an accompanying decline of about $3,000,000,000.

"Since September," it is stated, "the tendency toward credit reduction has been accelerated, as a decrease of investments has been added to the reduction in loans. This accelerated decline started with heavy withdrawals of deposits from banks, a considerable part of which represented the funds of foreign depositors, following the suspension of gold payments by Great Britain in September.

"The ensuing rise in money rates was accompanied by a decline in the prices of high grade securities, and this decline in security values, together with the loss of deposits, appears to have set in motion a cycle of credit reduction which continued after the immediate cause ceased to operate.

"Individual banks sold bonds or reduced their loans in order to strengthen their position. The result, however, was a further decline in the market value of investment securities and a loss of deposits by other banks, so that those banks also considered it necessary to strengthen their position by selling securities or reducing loans.

"This action, in turn, while strengthening for the time being the position of individual banks, merely passed the burden along to other banks and tended to perpetuate and make progressively larger the losses of deposits and the decline in the market value of bank assets for the banking system as a whole."

Texas Oil Cites Menace Of Gasoline Racketeers

New York, Jan. 1 (A.P.).—The Texas Corporation, in a statement to stockholders accompanying dividend checks today takes occasion to warn against dangers to the oil industry through the operation of gasoline "racketeers."

Increasing gasoline taxes and inadequate means of collection, it said, "have developed systematic and ruthless tax evasions by wholesale and retail marketers" whereby the public is sold inferior products at low (tax free) prices, and road-building plans are consequently threatened. The statement charges that gasoline "racketeering" has become so widespread that "some of the States have been forced to guard their navigable waters with armed patrol boats" and others "have been obliged to enlist the aid of the State police to cope with the smugglers."

Mt. Rainier Food Drive Brings Overflow Supply

Response to Welfare Association Appeal More Than Fills a Storeroom; 15 Families Are Given Help; Campaign to Be Renewed Soon.

So many groceries poured in on the Mount Rainier, Md., Welfare Association during a recent drive that they had to take down signs appealing for aid, according to W. A. Jones, president of the group organized to take care of the town's unemployed.

The storeroom set up in the town hall had only a limited capacity, Mr. Jones explained, and $100 worth of canned goods just about filled it. Half the supplies are now gone, however, and it is expected that the placards posted in grocery stores will be put up again soon.

The association has helped about fifteen families and has supplied food, clothing and fuel to about five. Christmas baskets, each of which included a chicken, were sent to four-teen of the families in the area. Included in the area's needs and fuel, Mr. Jones said, of about $350 which has been disbursed is a coal bill of $50.

This amount which has already been used came from the benefit moving picture show and a part of the contributions of Federal employes working in Washington. The greater part of the departmental fund has not yet been turned over to the association, however.

Four of the town's unemployed are now at work at jobs found by the association, which has supplied 50 days' work since its organization. The group has an ample store of clothes, and not many calls are received, except for shoes. It is expected that more persons in need of clothing will apply as the weather grows colder. The association's greatest need is for perishable food-

Safe in Postoffice Blown as '31 Ends

Taking advantage of the New Year's revelry to cover the sounds of their operation, yeggs blew the safe of the Riverdale postoffice, but did not gain any cash, it was learned yesterday morning.

The loss was discovered by Mrs. Anna Worley, postmistress in Riverdale, when she opened the office yesterday. The yeggs, evidently experienced, had gained admittance to the building by jimmying a side window. The force of the explosion badly damaged the interior of the office. Postal inspectors from Washington are investigating, but the loss will not be known until the check-up on the stock of stamps is completed.

New York, Jan. 1 (A.P.).—All security and commodity markets here were closed today in the usual observance of New Year. Commodity exchanges will remain closed tomorrow, but security trading will be resumed.

Pickands, Mather & Co., of Cleveland, well known manufacturers of pig iron, today announced the acquisition of the pig iron and coke sales business of Pickands, Brown & Co., of Chicago. The consolidation reunited two firms which were associated several years ago.

New bond offerings totaling $18,438,358 have been scheduled by 50 municipalities during the first week of the new year, according to the Daily Bond Buyer. In the final week in December offerings totaled $13,714,801.

Completion of arrangements was announced today for payment of interest on all Cuban highway bonds. In addition the Cuban government is retiring one series issue amounting to $6,250,000. Money for this purpose was forwarded last week to the Chase National Bank. Cuba is one of two Latin-American countries which has maintained its foreign government debt service without delay of any kind.

Temporary firming of money rates in the New York market was believed today to be near an end. Payment of about $1,000,000,000 in interest and dividends is expected early this month. In addition, about $300,000,000 of money withdrawn from banks for Christmas gift purposes is being returned. Earmarkings of gold for foreign account for the usual year-end window dressing purposes are expected to diminish now that December 31 bookkeeping requirements are out of the way.

FATAL PLANE CRASH IS BLAMED ON FOG

Accident Which Killed Four Held Due to Attempt to Return to Base.

Springfield, Ohio, Jan. 1 (A.P.).—The unsuccessful attempt of the pilot of an American Airways passenger plane to turn around and return to Columbus in the face of a heavy ground fog was believed to have caused the crash of the plane at Brighton, east of here, last night, resulting in the death of four passengers and the serious injury of the pilot.

The accident, as reconstructed by Capt. Frank M. McKee, State Director of Aeronautics, occurred when Pilot L. Bowan forced low by inclement weather attempted to turn about and head for Columbus only to strike a knoll with his left wing. In attempting to right the plane, McKee said, the pilot evidently turned it too far to the right and plunged it into the mud causing the plane to overturn.

McKee said his investigation disclosed no violation of flying regulations and that the pilot was informed by both Dayton and Columbus before he started out that the weather was safe. Bowen was handicapped by a low ceiling and ground fog, McKee stated.

While Capt. McKee had completed his investigation, two other inquiries were going forward tonight, one by the U. S. Department of Commerce inspector for this section, and the other by the Clark County coroner.

Three of the passengers were killed outright, while the fourth, W. D. Wieback, Cincinnati, died early today. Those who died in the crash were: A. L. Wenner, Cincinnati engineer, Louis E. Stone, Cincinnati, and A. C. Mayer, of Louisville, Ky.

Although Bowen was badly shaken and burned by coming in contact with the ship's engine, it was said he would recover.

ABOUT THE SHOWSHOPS

With NELSON B. BELL.

THE motion picture companies whose activities are concentrated on the West Coast promise a sharp increase in productional work with the beginning of the new year.

Plans announced by the major studios indicate that during the month of January some producers will have more than ten pictures under way at one time, approximately 25 films entering final stages and at least 20 starting. United Artists is shut down at present, but will probably come to life again in February. The others are rarin' to go as may be gathered from this brief outline of what the various companies have in view.

Warner Brothers and First National have six companies already at work and six more ready to start next week.

Fox, completing its move from Hollywood to its new Westwood studios, will start two companies in January and has five at work now, held over from last year.

Two pictures will be started in the next ten days by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, which now has five in production.

Paramount, with six companies working, will start 11 others this month and RKO plans to complete 21 pictures in three months, approximately one-third of them getting under way this January.

Universal will begin two or three at once.

How do you mean, depression?

Walter Hampden's tour in "Cyrano de Bergerac," recently announced here to include Washington in February, is in the nature of a grand transcontinental pilgrimage that will get under way the last week of this month.

Only a few Eastern cities outside New York have seen the renowned actor-manager in the famous heroic comedy by Edmond Rostand, in which he won a sensational triumph when he produced it in the National Theater, New York, eight years ago.

Opening in Richmond, Va., on Saturday, January 30, and then playing Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington, Mr. Hampden will jump the big production to St. Louis and Kansas City, going from there to the principal cities of Oklahoma, Texas and Arizona, arriving in Los Angeles on March 7. Two weeks will be devoted to that city and two more to San Francisco, the company then proceeding to the Pacific Northwest, and returning East by the Northern Pacific route into Minneapolis.

After the Twin Cities, "Cyrano" will touch Milwaukee, Chicago, Detroit, Cleveland, Cincinnati and Pittsburgh, and thus will practically have girdled the United States when the company returns to New York. The metropolis, however, will not see the long-nosed Gascon poet-duellist in action until next season, when Mr. Hampden expects to extend materially "Cyrano's" record of nearly 600 performances on Broadway by an indeterminate engagement at the holiday season.

With the exception of Los Angeles, San Francisco and Chicago, no city will be played more than half a week, even though the usual booking is for a week. Thus the opportunity to see "Cyrano" will be strictly limited.

Mr. Hampden's "Cyrano" will be one production which will actually be seen in the remote sections on the same scale of magnificence which has marked all its New York presentations.

After having seen with what persistence Master Jackie Cooper has been made the symbol of grief in at least part of the footage—usually the last of it, thus insuring a lingering memory of his anguish—of each of "Young Donovan's Kid," "Skippy," "The Champ" and now "Sooky," I am inclined to agree with the suggestion of a perceptive office associate that Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer evidently is trying to make a Ruth Chatterton of him!

The Cosmopolitan Grand Opera Company, Jacques Samossoud, musical and artistic director, to be heard in a week of operatic repertoire in the National Theater, beginning Monday evening, is opening its 1931-32 tour in Washington. It goes direct from the Capital to an engagement of four evenings and one matinee at the Auditorium Theater, Baltimore.

Lisa Gardner, one of the foremost of this city's exponents of the dance, by the way, is augmenting the ballet of the Cosmopolitan Company with eight of her most advanced pupils. The Washington girls who will appear with the opera are Christine Stewart, Jeanne Densmore, Beatrice Coles, Faye Rogers, Alice Louise Hunter, Anne Vucinovich, Betty Yoder and Eda Vomacka.

In case you hadn't heard, Fanchon & Marco's "Three Big Figures" idea, currently occupying the stage at the Fox Theater in conjunction with the second week's showing of "Delicious," costarring Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell, derives its name from three huge effigies painted on full-stage back drops. So now you know.

I thought at first they'd got hold of three of my notes!

Sidney Toler, appearing as Mulligan, the cop, in support of Sidney Fox in "Strictly Dishonorable," in its second week at the Rialto, played for twelve years under the late David Belasco's management and has written as many plays, all of them produced. That last is the hard part!

As long as we seem to be going in for title explaining, "Strictly Dishonorable" derives its name from Paul Lukas' reply to Sidney Fox when she, as the demure little Southern girl, asks him what his intentions toward her really are. You will, of course, be happy to know that he turns out to be an awful liar.

It is announced by Guthrie McClintic that immediately following its week at the Belasco Theater under the auspices of the Professional Players, beginning Monday evening, Dan Totheroh's new play of the Oregon Trail in 1848, "Distant Drums," starring Pauline Lord, will move at once into the National Theater, New York, where it will open on Monday night, January 11.

It was in the New York National Theater, you may be interested in recalling, that "The Trial of Mary Dugan" was staged by Mr. McClintic. It was in the National, also, that "Grand Hotel" recently closed a run that extended over more than a solid year.

Probably you're right and I'm cockeyed, but personally I don't see so much difference between 1932 and the old year of 1931!

Fifteen Persons Injured by Twister in Mississippi; Towns Threatened.

Jackson, Miss., Jan. 1 (A.P.).—A tornado and flood waters have combined to strike death, injuries and suffering to two States in the South.

The wind storm swept into the rural community of Robinson Springs, Ala., 11 miles from Montgomery, and killed two Negroes, injured fifteen others and wrecked several houses.

Meanwhile, the Tallahatchie River continued to rise in the Mississippi delta country and a number of towns in a wide area were threatened with complete evacuation.

The tornado struck yesterday, but news of it did not reach Montgomery until today, due to the isolation of the community. One Negro was blown about half a mile from his home. His body was found in a creek. Another was killed as his home collapsed.

The injured and homeless are being quartered in a barn until better provisions can be made for them. Doctors from nearby towns are caring for the injured.

In the flood zone, the towns of Glendora, Asa, Stone and Mimms face a great menace with levees threatening to crumble on all sides. Swan Lake, Webb and Sumner also were in great danger.

The Red Cross stood by with boats tonight, ready to evacuate Glendora and nearby towns as the water rose above the Christmas flood level and a crest of 10 inches more was expected from a 4-inch rain that fell along the headwaters of the river Wednesday night.

Refugees, camped on the ridges, were being moved to higher ground throughout the area. Batesville, further up the river, also expected its levees to crumble, and Wilmer Kennedy, Batesville newspaper publisher, said the inundation in Asa, Stone and Mimms would be worse than the Christmas flood.

Convicts continued to battle the flood. The town of Phillips was believed safe but the levees at the Jones Fedric plantation were expected to go out. Families in north Laflore County were suffering from lack of food.

Driver Says Car Victim Stepped Into Accident

George Hayon, 42, of 4126 Thirteenth street northwest, is in Garfield Hospital as the result of having been struck by an automobile last night. The accident occurred in Fourteenth street, between Belmont and Chapin streets.

George Terry, 30, of 1405 Howard place northwest, driver of the car, said Hayon stepped from the curb in front of the automobile. He took the victim to the hospital, where Hayon was treated for lacerations on the head, bruises and shock. No charges were placed against Terry.

HINDENBURG PLEADS ANEW FOR ARMS CUT

Again Urges Cooperation of Powers in Work for Recovery.

Berlin, Jan. 1 (A.P.).—President Paul von Hindenburg, replying today to the new year's greetings of the diplomatic corps, renewed his plea for disarmament and international cooperation in the solution of the world's economic troubles.

"The nation can not overcome the world crisis," he said. "All governments should cooperate in devising a solution which will permit recovery of world trade. It must not happen that hopes for disarmament should be dashed once more. If confidence is to be restored there must be equality before the law for all nations."

The president was up and doing before most of Berlin's new year celebrants were awake. In the biting cold of early morning he appeared on the verandah of the executive mansion for the ceremony of changing the guard. About 100 men and women who had been stamping their feet for an hour in the northerly wind cheered as he came out.

Sheriff to Protect Cox Jobless March

Police protection for the "Father Cox Jobless March," from Harrisburg, Pa., to Washington, was promised yesterday for a march through Arlington County, by Sheriff Howard B. Fields. The sheriff promised to take necessary steps to guard the marchers after he received a letter from Gov. John Garland Pollard asking that the marchers be protected.

The march, demanding of Federal authorities the "divine and human right to work," will start from Harrisburg January 5, Gov. Pollard was informed in a letter from the Rev. James R. Cox, pastor of St. Patrick's Catholic Church of Pittsburgh, one of the backers of the demonstration. The marchers, under sponsorship of the "Independent Merchants of Allegheny County," plan to visit the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier while here.

Recipe for Mocha Bonbons Wins $5 for Miss Kerfoot

Coffee-Flavored Candies Are Different and Delicious.

A confectionary recipe took The Post's $5 award this week. It is a formula for Mocha Bonbons, which are coffee-flavored candies, which should prove to be both different and delicious in taste.

Miss Alice Kerfoot, of 906 Harrison avenue, Riverdale, Md., submitted the recipe. The weekly recipe contest of The Post is open to those recipes in which products advertised in the food page are used.

Following are Miss Kerfoot's ingredients and directions for preparation of Mocha Bonbons:

1½ cups Wilkins clear coffee.
2 tablespoons Land o' Lakes butter.
2 tablespoons fresh cream.
½ cup XXXX sugar.
½ cup M. B. Frazier's assorted nut meats.

Boil sugar, coffee and sirup to soft ball stage. Remove from fire and pour into buttered dish. When cool stir with spoon and empty onto a sugar-powdered board. Market Meanderings

By MILDRED REED BUNDY

Many Unusual Items of Food Are Found by Meanderer in Friendly Market in Northwest Section; Big Reduction in Prices Noted.

A friendly market, brightly lighted, plantifully stocked, serves a big section of Northwest Washington Housewives shopping in this market are recognised by the marketers, spoken to by name. Little conversations between housewives and marketers as to whether Christmas was merry in their respective households, took place this week. Little girls tell the family butcher how many dolls Santa brought. And "Happy New Year!" was an accompaniment of many bags of food handed to the purchasers.

The new year is having a good start, it seemed to the meanderer, when she saw a big sign in this market mentioned above, which read: "Porterhouse, sirloin or round steak, 27 cents a pound." At that rate every family can afford a good steak dinner at the beginning of the year, and maybe more to follow. For a guest dinner there might even be a two-inch porterhouse, with nothing depressed about it. In fact it might be piled with mushrooms without extravagance, for at this market one can find fine quality mushrooms for 37 cents a pound, or less.

The Chayote or trellis squash has appeared on this Washington market. The meanderer found it in the chain store section. Chayote is pronounced chi-o-ti. It's a high hat squash, but costing about the same as ordinary squash, ten cents a piece. Cayotes may be boiled, creamed baked, stuffed, fried, used in soups, or stews, or pickled. The flavor of the cayote is thought to be superior to that of the summer squash. It comes to Washington from Florida, though its original home was in South America.

"Vegetables and fruits in my shop are just about 20 per cent cheaper than they were the first of last year," the chain store marketer told the meanderer. "So that even though we make as many sales as we did this time last year, our sales totals are much decreased. Housewives buy no larger quantities than has been their custom, simply because foods are cheap." This is indeed the housewife's year to make a splendidly economical showing in her food budget. Some of the 1932 low prices in this particular shop include green beans, three pounds for 25 cents; new potatoes, two pounds, 15 cents; sweet potatoes, three pounds, 10 cents; Idaho baking potatoes, five pounds, 15 cents; new cabbage, two pounds, 15 cents; lima beans in the pod, two pounds, 29 cents, and grapefruit, three for 10 cents.

Scotch oatmeal in its original state, said to be a splendid bone builder for babies, is found in a shop which faces the big market mentioned above. This little shop specializes in hygienic foods, some of which are highly recommended by doctors. Other foods there need no physician's recommendation to give them appeal, such as dry bread dates from California; orange honey from Florida; tulip tree honey; alfalfa honey; honey butter, which is the honey product unheated, and brown rice from California.

Fresh eggs, large, full value type, sell for 45 cents per dozen in this Georgia avenue market. The eggs are carefully separated from pullet eggs, which sell there for 30 cents a dozen. Fresh boxes of these eggs are on sale three times each week.

Tiny letters of the alphabet made of macaroni, such as are used in canned soups, may be bought in bulk in a corner of a big Northwest market. They sell for 12 cents a pound. These soup letters are used by many mothers in preparing especially appealing soups for children.

Pickled herrings from Holland, 5 cents each, are for sale in the same corner of the market where the soup letters are found. In this interesting corner there are also Geman peppernut cookies, two dozen for 35 cents; and small whole tomatoes, packed in Italy, which are particularly delectable when used in Italian spaghetti mixtures.

A "help yourself" shop in a Northwest market is probably one of the most economical spots in Washington. Wandering about there the meanderer came face to face with reduced prices in foods that are actually startling, such as three packages of macaroni for 25 cents, 4 pounds of rice, 25 cents; two packages of tapioca, 25 cents; four cans of tomatoes, 25 cents; 16-ounce cans baked beans, 5 cents each; dried limas, 10 cents a pound; dried apricots, 15 cents per pound, and dried prunes, 10 cents per pound.

Potatoes have seen one of the most distinct reductions in price during the last year. In December of 1930 10 pounds of potatoes were selling for from 25 to 29 cents, while at the end of 1931 10 pounds of potatoes cost but 15 cents.

Scrambled Dried Beef.

2 tablespoons fat
1 cup tomato pulp or canned tomatoes
1 cup cheese, grated
Dash of paprika
Dash of mustard
8 slices hot buttered toast

Melt fat or bacon drippings, add the dried beef and other ingredients, and cook slowly, stirring constantly until very hot and slightly thickened (6 to 8 minutes). Serve hot on toast. Serves 8.

California Salad.

California Salad: Place the slices from a No. 2½ can of pineapple in crisp lettuce leaves. Cream together one package of cream cheese and one triangle Roquefort cheese, and add one-fourth cup raisins and one-fourth cup chopped dates. Pile lightly in center of pineapple and serve with mayonnaise slightly thinned with pineapple syrup. This serves eight.

JANUARY 2, 1907.

At the inquest held before Coroner Nevitt in an effort to accurately fix the blame for the Terra Cotta Railroad accident testimony was adduced tending to show that Engineer Hildebrand violated the rules when he passed a block signal.

Mayor McClellan of New York today issued a manifesto defying Charles F. Murphy and the Tammany organization as it is at the present time constituted.

For the second time within a week the tragedy of a serious railroad accident has occurred. Thirty-five persons were killed yesterday at Topeka, Kans., in a head-on collision.

The diplomatic reception at the White House will be held tonight. President Roosevelt said good-by to two of his sons this afternoon at the station, Theodore, jr., returning to Harvard and Kermit to Groton.

THE ONCE OVER

By H. I. PHILLIPS

ELMER TWITCHELL CONSIDERS BUYING LABRADOR.

DEAR ED: Could you give me some more details about the offer to sell Labrador? It looks to me like a good proposition. Conditions being what they are in the major countries, Labrador strikes me as having a special appeal at this time. In fact, I see big possibilities in developing it as a grand place for people who want to get away from it all. Please tell me where I can get blue prints, a prospectus and other details at once.

* * * *

In the first place, Labrador has a very small population and practically nobody there has had any stock market losses. Consequently it would be a grand place to get away from those modern pests, the persons who at some time in any conversation, tell what they might have been worth if they had sold in August, 1929.

* * * *

There are only 4,200 inhabitants in Labrador anyhow, fewer people than you can find on any American street corner these days squawking about business conditions. About a fourth of sthese people are Eskimos, which cuts down immediately the number of people who might ask you to make a fourth at bridge. The more I think about this Labrador proposition, the more it appeals to me as a great buy.

* * * *

* * * *

Labrador is also free from interurban motor buses, motorcycle cops, liveried doormen, news reels, three-decker sandwiches, drug store lunches, professional reformers, bootleggers, and young men who are always ringing the front bell and asking you to subscribe to three magazines and help send them through college.

* * * *

No speeches from the American Senate or House ever reach Labrador, even in the milder season, and as few big newspapers get into the interior, a resident there is saved from all those depressing Basel verdicts, German financial statements, ultimatums from Mr. Stimson, and the complete stock market reports. What I can't understand is why there isn't a rush to buy Labrador regardless of terms.

* * * *

Anyhow, I am in the market for the place and any further data from you will be appreciated.

Yours truly,
ELMER TWITCHELL.

P. S.—I understand that by living in Labrador you can even be spared the details of the Culbertson-Lenz bridge match.

EAST ALL-STARS DEFEAT WEST, 6-0, BEFORE 50,000

This MORNING with SHIRLEY L. POVICH

ORGANIZED baseball's reverent desire to steer clear of the courts of law was emphasized this week in an item in the news dispatches that told of the decision of Phil Ball, owner of the St. Louis Browns, to drop his suit against Kenesaw Mountain Landis in the case of Outfielder Fred Bennett, who had been declared a free agent by the baseball commissioner.

The background of the Bennett case, briefly, is this: The player was the property of the Browns for three years, and in that time had been released on option of recall to the Milwaukee and Tulsa clubs. Each player may be optioned to the minor leagues only twice under the major league code. The Browns then sold Bennett outright to the Milwaukee club, but inasmuch as both teams were operated under common ownership, Landis construed the move as a violation of the option rules and declared Bennett a free agent. Both clubs thus lost title to the player.

Ball tested Landis' authority in the Milwaukee courts and the baseball commissioner was sustained. The Browns' owner then noted an appeal and was prepared to pursue the case at law.

In his decision to abandon further attempts to regain title to Bennett, Ball said he was persuaded to drop the case by Clark Griffith, owner of the Nats, and John Quinn, president of the Boston Red Sox.

The interest of Griffith and Quinn in the case was their aversion to having baseball dragged through the courts. The national pastime and the law have had several tiffs, notably in the Federal League days, and each time the by-laws peculiar to the game have been upheld. But the magnates dislike to draw too much attention to the reserve clause in players' contracts, which has always been the bone of contention.

This reserve clause, which gives the contracting club the right to renew its contract with a player to the exclusion of bids of other clubs is vital to the perpetuation of the game. Should the players be thrown into the open market at the end of each season, the richest clubs would gobble up the best performers, thus leaving the poorer teams with inferior lineups and creating a distinctly unbalanced circuit. It is the reserve clause that protects the poorer clubs.

The courts have always looked kindly if skeptically on this reserve clause, realizing that if the game were to be preserved, such a privilege must be allowed in baseball. Any ruling against the practice would threaten the entire investments of the magnates, which run into hundreds of millions in real estate, stadiums and titles to valuable players.

One factor that has apparently been taken into consideration by the courts is the inordinate salaries drawn by ball players. Any adverse decision against baseball as now conducted under the reserve clause would strip thousands of players of wages higher than are paid in most pursuits and professions and both magnates and players would be the sufferers.

Uncle Sam's mails will carry sad tidings today to the several Nats who have been the high-salaried players of the club in recent years. Clark Griffith will mail out the 1932 contracts today and Monday.

Griffith has announced that the recent action of the major leagues at their joint meeting portends in truth a revision downward in the salary scale. But it will not be the players drawing average wages who will be hit, Griffith says. The action was aimed at the higher-salaried brigade, drawing from $8,400 upward.

No difficulties are anticipated by Griffith in bringing his players into the fold. "They ought to realize that they are the last element to be hit by the depression," said the owner of the Nats. "They'll still be paid high wages, but they've got to take a cut."

Howell Will Forfeit Mid-Atlantic Golf Title

Richmond, Va., Jan. 1 (A.P.).—Billy Howell, the boy wonder of the 1921 United States amateur golf tournament, said today he has decided to relinquish his Middle Atlantic title, held by him for the last two years.

Although planning a big campaign for this year, Howell said according to the present outlook he will not enter the Middle Atlantic tournament. He plans, however, to enter the national amateur, in which he was a semifinalist last year, and the Southern amateur. He is also planning to defend his title in the State amateur and in the Old Dominion tournament. He won the latter title last spring by defeating Phil Perkins, former British amateur king.

LONDOS TOSSES STEINBORN.

Cincinnati, Jan. 1 (A.P.).—Jim Londos, recognized by the National Wrestling Association as heavyweight wrestling champion threw Milo Steinborn, of Germany, in two straight falls here today. The first was won in 33:27 with a lift and slam and the second in 1:06 with the same hold.

RACE DRIVERS INJURED.

Oakland, Calif., Jan. 1 (A.P.).—Ralph Hepburn of Los Angeles and Bryan Saulpaugh of Rock Island, Ill., widely known drivers, were injured seriously today when their cars skidded and turned over on the Oakland dirt speedway during a race that was to have been 100 miles but was stopped on the fifty-first lap by rain.

Both drivers were taken to a hospital where it was said they were severely cut, bruised and scratched and suffered from possible skull fractures.

Hunt Beaten In Boys' Net Finals

BALTIMORE, Md., Jan. 1, 1932.—Failing at all times to exhibit the form he showed during the early rounds of the tournament, Gilbert Hunt, Washington, D. C., boys' tennis champion, fell in the final round of the National Indoors Boys' Tournament here today before the steady play of a distinct outsider, Howard Schein, of West Side High School, Newark, N. J. The score was 6—1, 8—6.

Hunt's enormous number of errors, coming off service, ground stroke and volley alike, caused his downfall, rather than any attacking motive on the part of Schein. The New Jersey youth, quick to sense that Hunt's touch was far off, boiled down his own game to a consistent backcourt style of keeping the ball in play.

Washington Boy Rallies.

It brought results quickly in the first set, Hunt being unable to win a game after taking the first. The Washingtonian rallied at the start of the second set, winning the first three games, and went to 5—3 on the best exhibition of the day, but with the set in his grasp he ran afoul of Schein's steadiness once more and disappeared.

It was rated the greatest upset of the giant young net rally for in the junior event the seeded No. 1 player and defending champion, Mark Hecht, of the University of Pennsylvania, downed Raney Donovan, Fordham, in straight sets, 7—5, 6—0, 6—4.

Hunt, paired with Frank Kaufman, of Friends' School, Baltimore, lost in the final round of the doubles to George B. Dunn, Philadelphia, and Lyman Grossman, White Plains, 6—4, 6—3. The junior doubles fell to Bernie Friedman and Lester Kabacoff, Philadelphia, who beat Giles Veratreten and Albert Law, of New York University, 7—5, 8—6, 4—6, 1—6, 6—3.

HERE'S a chance to win a bet! How many times can you fold a newspaper, edge to edge? No matter how hard you try, you can not fold a single or double spread newspaper more than eight times. It you doubt it, try it.

A sheet of paper would reach higher than the Empire State Building if it were folded just 24 times. If you folded it 10 times more, it would smack the man in the moon square in the face.

If you took a sheet of paper just .001 of an inch thick, and folded it 53 times, it would reach all the way to the sun—and 50,000,000 miles beyond. If you folded it just once more, it would reach to the sun and back again, and if you still felt ambitious, you could turn it back to the sun again, and there would still be millions of miles to spare.

It's just like the old cent-a-day problem. At first thought, not many people would be willing to start working for one cent the first day, two cents the second day, four cents the third day, and so on, for a month. But if you will take a piece of paper and do a little figuring, you will find that on the 30th day you would receive over $5,000,000, and for the 31st day your salary would be $10,737,418.24.

ARMOUR'S 68 TOPS FIELD AT MIAMI

Scot 5 Under Par in $2,500 Open; Mattson's 71 Next.

By REX SAFFER.

MIAMI, Fla., Jan. 1 (A.P.).—Tommy Armour, the Scot who holds the British open championship, shot a sizzling 33-35—68 today to take commanding lead of 159 players at the quarter mark of the 72-hole $2,500 Miami Open Golf Tournament.

Tommy wielded magic clubs about the course to lead Len Mattson, St. Paul professional, his nearest competitor, by two strokes for the 18 holes.

F. Deering, Chicago, scored a 36-35—71 early in the day, but had to split third place honors with dapper little Henri Ciuci, Mill River, Conn., who scooted into the clubhouse with the last threesome to record a 37-34—71.

Hank Miller, La Porte, Ind.; Ralph Kingsrud, Fargo, N. Dak., and Wild Bill Mehlhorn, New York, had 73's, while Joe Turnesa, Elmsford, N. Y., defending champion, had to be content with a 74. Lee Chase, Miami, was low amateur, as he tied with Turnesa and three others at this mark.

Armour's long game was his forte, as he shot five strokes under the 37-36—73 par of the course, out his

West's Gridmen Held To Gain of 10 Yards

San Francisco, Calif., Jan. 1 (A.P.).—Ten yards represented the total yards gained by the All-West team against the All-East eleven in the charity game here today. This was a tribute to the pregame prediction of the defensive strength of the Eastern stars. The East gained 138 yards from scrimmage and rolled up eight first downs to one for the West, which was aided by a penalty. The Easterners tried two passes and the Westerners five, but none was completed. The East was penalized 20 to 25 for the West. Twelve Eastern punts averaged 36 yards and 14 Western punts averaged 35.

Kentucky Faces Clemson In Basket Ball Debut

Atlanta, Ga., Jan. 1 (A.P.).—Kentucky's Wildcats, runners-up to Maryland for the Southern Conference basket ball championship in 1931, open the new conference season tomorrow night with Clemson at Lexington, Ky.

The Wildcats lost several of the stars of their last year's quintet, but still have George Yates, the all-Southern center, to lead them as captain.

The Kentuckians already have played four games outside the conference, but Clemson will be making its debut. The Lexington team ranks as the favorite.

Three other games are scheduled for Saturday night. Vanderbilt has an intersectional game with Miami University at Oxford, Miami; Florida plays Stetson at De Land, Fla., and Georgia faces Chattanooga University in the final of a two-game series.

Thistle Fyrn Winner In Mud at Havana

Havana, Cuba, Jan. 1 (A.P.).—Closing gamely through the stretch run, Thistle Fyrn, 6-year-old bay daughter of My Play—Mildred, accounted for the New Year's handicap which featured the program at Oriental Park today. Her advantage over S. S. Friedlein's Fortunate Youth at the finish of the mile and one-sixteenth was three-quarers of a length, while farther back finished V. Stephens' Jack Collins, in third position.

Six started in the race, two of which, Thistle Fyrn and Patricia Marian, carried the green and white silks of George Collins. The winner was ridden by J. Mattioli and her victory added $2,750 net to the coffers of the winning stable.

The race was run over a track that had been drenched during the night by heavy rains and was a veritable quagmire.

ROSENBLOOM BEATEN.

Rosenbloom, tired and slow, won only two rounds.

FIGHT ARENA BOUGHT BY CORNELL

THE Mid City Arena, located near Laurel, Md., on the Washington-Baltimore boulevard, will be operated under new management next spring and summer if negotiations now under way are consummated, it was learned yesterday.

C. E. (Fats) Cornell, Washington lunchroom proprietor and well known in local boxing circles, has purchased the arena and fixtures for a price said to be more than $1,000. However, Cornell does not hold the lease, which is said to have been secured by Angy Gerrin, general manager of the original operating organization, at the time the arena was built early last summer. More than $8,000 was spent by Gerrin's organization in construction and fitting of the arena, which has a seating capacity of 7,500.

The arena was closed in August after three shows had been staged. The bouts, though successful from a boxing standpoint, failed to yield enough money to satisfy creditors.

Graffagnini, Turfman, Hurt in Auto Collision

New Orleans, La., Jan. 1 (A.P.).—Charles Graffagnini, owner of horses that have raced on many tracks throughout the country, was critically injured here early today in an automobile accident.

New York, Jan. 1 (A.P.).—Albert Burke, Irish professional, and J. Emmett Pare, of Chicago, easily advanced to the semifinal round of the national indoor professional lawn tennis tournament at the Seventy-first Regiment Armory today.

Burke turned back Thomas Worthley, of New York, with the loss of only one game, winning 6—1, 6—0, 6—0. Pare had a little more trouble with J. Basil Maguire, of New York, but won in straight sets, 6—3, 6—3, 6—1.

In the doubles semifinals, Richards and Burke eliminated Allen Behr and Ted Ericha, 6—0, 7—5, while Pare and Wood defeated Paul Heston and Basil Maguire, 6—3, 8—6.

Tulane Bows To Trojans By 21-12

pected to excel, played a big part in Southern California's second period touchdown. After a first period in which the famed power drive of the Southern Californians had functioned with only indifferent success, the Trojans caught the lads from New Orleans flatfooted with a long pass and from there went on to score. The period had opened with Tulane in a precarious position. The Greenies had the ball but it was on their own five yard line as a result of a well-directed kick from Orville Hohler's toe. Wop Glover did something about that right away by dashing 58 yards on the first play of the quarter but this was followed by two losing plays and a punt went only to Southern California's 36 yard line.

Taking the ball there, the Trojans covered the 65 yards to the goal line in five plays. A lateral pass from Mohler to Shaver picked up seven and Mohler made a first down on his own 49 yard line. With the Greenies concentrated up front to stop another drive, Mohler tossed the ball to Gordon Clark on Tulane's 28 yard line, a gain of 23 yards.

Interference Forms For Shaver.

A world of interference formed in front of Shaver on the next play and he lugged the ball to Tulane's 6-yard line. The old reverse play which has proved a great help to Southern California all season was then called and Ray Starling went across the goal line.

Tulane could not get its forward passing machinery properly oiled in the first half, trying eight tosses with no luck but in the second half, of nine thrown, five were good, one for a touchdown. The home team completed its only pass in the first half, paving the way for the first counter of the game.

The Greenies were trailing 21 to 0 before their offensive began to click. After the third Trojan score, the visitors took the kick-off and Glover ran to his 25-yard line. Zimmerman made a first down on the 35-yard line. Harry (Wop) Glover, who had previously electrified the crowd with the longest run of the day, made another not so long, but more spectacular. He twisted and slipped through a maze of tacklers and was not stopped until he reached Southern California's 16-yard line.

Haynes Scatches Pass Over Goal Line.

Johnny Baker, a sure-footed Trojan, kicked all three points after touchdown, but when Zimmerman tried to add the extra credit, Ernie Smith leaped up and blocked it.

Tulane made the costly fumbles all even when Capt. Jerry Dalrymple recovered Mohler's miscue on Southern California's 35-yard line in the fourth period. Zimmerman lost three yards when Ray Starling broke through and upset him. Zimmerman passed to Dalrymple for an 11-yard gain and Glover then ran to the 18-yard line.

A pass just slipped from the tips of Dalrymple's fingers, but on the next pass effort, three or four Southern Californians rushed in and batted the ball into the air. Dalrymple leaped high to make a sensational catch and fell within three yards of the goal line.

Glover Hits Line For Touchdown.

A smash into the line gained only inches, but on the next play, Glover slipped across for his team's second touchdown. Again the extra point failed, the try this time being through the medium of a pass. The alert Pinckert knocked the ball down.

Pinckert was the outstanding player on the field, but he received valuable aid from the tall Bob Hall, a useful tackle, who also won distinction in the Trojan victory over Notre Dame. Hall played a smart defensive game and took out Capt. Dalrymple on Pinckert's two touchdown sprints.

Capt. Dalrymple, in spite of injuries which threatened for a time to keep him out of Tulan'es big game, played a great offensive game in its latter stages, but his running mate, Lefty Haynes, may have had a slight edge on all-around end play.

Zimmerman, a versatile back, lived up to his advance reputation, but had to move over to make a place for Glover, one of the most elusive backs seen in a Western football field this year. Glover, called Wop, short for Harry, was a hard man to get down and hard to keep down.

W. P. Lodrigues, playing out of the line on a roving assignment, complicated the Trojans' offensive, and like most of his teammates played the full 60 minutes.

All but three of the Greenbacks enlisted for the duration of the war when they started play. The Trojans, on the other hand, tossed in substitutes at frequent intervals.

Batters on Trojans May Be Losers.

After the game, as the major part of the big crowd cheered, Howard H. Jones, coach of Southern California, was presented an automobile as the material part of the Erskine award and his players were told they were champions of the football universe.

Only about 2,000 seats in the Rose Bowl were unoccupied when play started and they were soon filled by an enthusiastic crowd which literally crashed hte gate, one barrier being carried from its hinges as the outsiders surged in. The crowd made a new attendance record for the Tournament of Roses event.

Williams' Future As Sprinter Vague

Canadian Novice Who Won Fame in 1928 Confident of Comeback.

Vancouver, B. C., Jan. 1 (A.P.).—Wherever discussion begins these days of Canadian chances in the next Olympics one question is always heard: "What of Williams?"

In 1928, Percy Williams, then an unknown Canadian schoolboy, went to Amsterdam and won the 100 and 200 meter dashes for the Maple Leaf team. He returned to continue his fine running and remain undefeated until 1930 when he pulled a ligament in a race against Eddie Tolan and George Simpson in Vancouver and finished a poor third.

He reinjured the leg again in winning the 100-meter dash at the British Empire games, where he was only one-fifth of a second back of Tolan's universal mark, and he has not run a good race since.

Many are inclined to believe he is through as an Olympic competitor, but Percy himself believes he will regain his old form. He believes his leg is sound again and that when the starters are called to the line in Los Angeles for the 100 and the 200 he will be on the line and the favorite.

Purvis Dives Over Goal To Score

Two Poor Punts Lead to Touchdown in First Period.

By RUSSELL NEWLAND.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 1 (A.P.).—Crashing over a touchdown in the closing minutes of the first period and showing a decided superiority on both offense and defense throughout the contest, East conquered West, 6—0, today in a gridiron struggle played in the game of charity.

Some 50,000 fans filled Kezar Stadium to near capacity at the start of the game, but a steady downpour after the first quarter rained half the crowd out.

Meanwhile some of the outstanding football stars of the country slipped and slid through mud inches deep as the Eastern representatives adapted themselves to conditions in better fashion than their opponents.

With the field comparatively dry during the opening period, the Easterners took advantage of two poor punts by the Westerners to put the ball into play 24 yards from goal. Steady smashes at the line, with the East's powerful forward wall opening up huge holes, enabled Russell, of Northwestern, and Purvis, of Purdue, starting full back and right half, respectively, to push the pigskin over.

Poor Kicking Costly.

In two kicking exchanges, Mason, Southern Methodist, starting quarterback for the West, and Kleckner of San Francisco, left half, booted the ball only 17 yards and 21 yards. It gave the East possession of the ball deep in Western territory. Russell charged three times for gains of 7, 2 and 3 yards. Purvis added 7 yards and Russell 4 more.

With the ball on the one-yard line, Russell was twice held for no gain on plunges at center, but Purvis slipped through tackle for the touchdown. Moroton, of Dartmouth, who started at the East quarterback position, failed to convert the extra point on a drop kick.

From the time the score was made until the closing gun, the East was on the offensive. In the second period, the West reached the exact mid field mark but not once was able to penetrate the territory of the East.

The third quarter developed into a kicking duel, while in the last period the East put on two marches that brought the ball almost to the opposing goal line. Mason of the West fumbled on his own 24 yard line and Chalmers, guard, New York University, recovered. After advancing the ball 19 yards, the East lost possession when the West held for downs on the 5-yard mark.

East Gets Break On Penalty.

Mason kicked from behind his own goal. It was a long punt, but the West was penalized 15 yards for piling up and the East put the ball into play 31 yards from the Western goal. Clark Hinkle, full back, Bucknell, carried the ball six times for a total gain of 28 yards, while John Somers, quarter back, Minnesota, gained a yard and lost one during the drive. The Westerners finally held on their 34-yard mark and kicked out of danger.

Hinkle was the back field star for the East, gaining a total of 54 yards the eleven times he carried the oval. On the line, Orsi, of Colgate, end; Hickman, of Tennessee, guard, and Marvill, of Northwestern, tackle, were outstanding performers.

Central's Athletic Program Dominated by Former Stars

IT WAS Alumni Day at Central High School yesterday, and in keeping with that aspect five alumni and alumae teams defeated five bands of current Central athletes in three sports, basket ball, swimming and rifle.

Dominating not only the day, but the basket ball season in Washington to date, was the thrilling 29-to-27 victory of the Alumni five over the 1931-1932 Central tossers. It was about the best played game of the year, and produced a fighting Alumni squad which found its touch in the last few seconds of play to win the ball game.

Jumping into an early lead by dint of a better passing and shooting attack, the Central combination of Burke and Smith, forwards; Keyser, center, and Swift and Nau, guards, led the stellar aggregation of former Centralites from the start of the game until the last minute of play, but never by any commanding margin.

Billy Burke, captain of the varsity, put his side ahead, 14 to 12, at the end of the half, and dominated the play throughout the third quarter, at which time Central led, 21 to 15. As play speeded up in the home stretch, Gene Swift, varsity guard, went out of the game on personals and his eviction seemed to take life from the squad. Their hitherto splendid defensive play weakened, and the Alumni came on with redoubled efforts.

Forrest Burgess, the city's leading scorer, took the situation in hand in the last minute, tying the score at 27 to 27 with a foul goal, and then winning it within a shadow of the end of the game with a beautiful running shot from the side lines.

Close competition marked the alumnae rifle match, which went to the alumnae by the margin of three points, 490 to 487. Roberta Wright gave her side its margin with a perfect score, 100. The alumni rifle team won as it pleased, 385 to 372, and the alumnae swimmers had a swimaway against the current natators, 28 to 11.

Barry in Strenuous Drill For Test Against Brown

By JACK ESPEY.

FULLY recovered from his recent gruelling bout with Herman Weiner, Reds Barry underwent a strenuous program of training yesterday in preparation for his eight-round engagement with Natie Brown, of New York, scheduled next Tuesday night as the feature of the Day Nursery benefit bouts in Fortner's Arena, Alexandria.

Barry was knocked down for a count of nine by a terrific left hook in the fourth round by Weiner, but he finished that bout in fairly fresh physical condition. Yesterday he showed no effects whatsoever of the punch that nearly put him out for the first time in his career as he worked the equivalent of ten rounds of fighting in the Mohawk Club gymnasium.

For four rounds Barry sparred with Billy Schwartz, Alexandria light heavyweight, after which he spent fifteen minutes punching the bag and a couple of shorter periods rope-skipping and shadow-boxing. He pronounced himself in tiptop shape afterward and said that he probably will weigh 196 pounds Tuesday night. This was his weight in the Weiner bout.

His clash with Brown, a nationally known heavyweight, should go far toward determining how Barry compares with fighters of wide reputation. Brown has defeated K. O Christner, drawn with Max Baer and beaten Billy Jones, who last Wednesday won a decision over Larry Johnson in the national light heavyweight elimination tournament at Chicago.

If Barry can outpoint or knock out Brown, his stock will automatically ascend with skyrocket speed and thereafter he should be able to secure matches in the bigger boxing centers such as Philadelphia and New York. However, if he fails, the Southeast youngster will not be disgraced. He is still very young in the game and has plenty of time in which to develop the qualities necessary to success in major ring competition.

ARRAS WINS TROPICAL PARK FEATURE IN STRETCH DRIVE

Mills' Riding Factor in Victory

The victory of Arras was due chiefly to the perfect handling he received from little Hank Mills, the popular apprentice. Arras paid $5.60 for $2 and ran the distance over a slow track in 1:48 2-5.

The small field broke well and Bay Angon was rushed to the front going to the first turn. Arras and Calf Roper were next in line. The positions remained the same as they sailed along the back stretch, with Rip Van Winkle and Skyway being outrun, well back. Calf Roper was rushed to the leaders approaching the far turn and, coming around the bend, Bay Angon faltered, while Arras and Calf Roper approached the stretch turn heads apart. Mills rode smoothly and steadily, saved ground to hold a head margin over Calf Roper when straightened out. The boy clearly outrode Chiavetti, the favorite's rider, through the closing strides. Rip Van Winkle made up ground fast in the last furlong to overhaul the tired Bay Angon.

Dusky Dame Takes "Baby" Race.

The first "baby" race of the season attracted thirteen budding racers to the post, and when it was all over, H. C. Ragan's Dusky Dame emerged on top, to pay $20.40 for $2. The daughter of Single Foot scored by a length and a half over Chuck B., while the latter was three lengths before Be Silent. Dusky Dame rushed to the front right after the field started on the journey of about 2 furlongs, and after opening up three lengths lead over Chuck B., was ridden out to take the purse. Be Silent raced close up all the way and held Hildur Rock safe for third money.

The longest priced winner of the meeting materialized in the second race when Play Furious scored in a drive and paid $53.10 for $2. Captain's Girl took the place a head away and four lengths in advance of Mortime. The latter again was made favorite and stopped as he did in his recent effort. Captain's Girl followed the faint-hearted son of Morvich to the stretch when Play Furious came along with a great burst of speed, which overcame both the leaders in the closing strides. Mortime barely saved the show from Gay Pal.

Gibby's Choice Easy Winner.

Gibby's Choice was the people's choice in the third event, and the gelding easily took the purse, beating Margaret Parker by four lengths. Bounder barely failed to get up for the place. Margaret Parker showed plenty of speed and approached the head of the stretch with two lengths advantage over Sunny Star and Gibby's Choice, but the latter spurted into the lead with an easy stride after straightening out and drew away in a gallop. He paid $3.10.

Bird of Prey, exactly suited by softer track conditions, cantered to victory in the fourth event, winning by three lengths. Fair Billows took the place from Laftar by two lengths. Bird of Prey ran Shasta Lover into submission early and opened up a wide lead. Fair Billows supplied chief contention through the stretch but could not menace the winner, which paid $18.

Hank Mills again earned a double by kicking home Bozo the even-money choice in the sixth race. This was a test of a mile and one-quarter, and it brought a stirring finish. Bozo outlasting Nosegay to register by a nose. Frances St. L. was third. Mills put up another beautiful ride, nursing Bozo along in front all the way and riding powerfully at the end to stave off Nosegay, which forced the pace throughout.

Coady gave the talent another triumph in the last race beating Sand Fiddler by a length and a half. Sand Fiddler beat Chancellor by six lengths for the place. The winner paid $4.40.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DUSKY DAME, $20.40, $10.80, $4.60; CHUCK B., $7.60, $3.60; BE SILENT, $6.30.

DUSKY DAME settled down shortly after the break and raced in resolute fashion all the way. She was ridden out at end to stall off CHUCK B. The latter closed with determination and stood punishment gamely. BE SILENT outbroke her field, but could not keep pace with leaders, was driving hard at end and just lasted long enough to stall off HILDUR ROCK. BIG LEAGUER, a bit fractious at barrier, was interfered with when start came. IREDELL broke free and clear, but ran green. BONNIE LILLIAN was slow to get going.

SECOND RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, easily. Went to post at 3:05½. Off at 3:10. Winner, J. Hostetter's b. c. PLAY FURIOUS raced out in the middle of the track all the way, responded full of courage when put to a drive and, wearing CAPTAIN'S GIRL down, was up in the final strides to outgame the latter. CAPTAIN'S GIRL, a keen factor from the break, hung after passing the tiring pacemaker in stretch run. MORTIME went to the front with a rush soon after the break and showed his usual burst of early speed. He collapsed last furlong. GAY PAL raced in behind horses most of the journey. He finished with a belated rush.

THIRD RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:35. Off at 3:36. Winner, E. B. McAtee's b. g. GIBBY'S CHOICE was rated off the pace until rounding the turn into stretch, slipped through next to rail and easily disposed of the tiring MARGARET PARKER last furlong. MARGARET PARKER, showing lots of speed from the break, raced under restraint the first half mile. She collapsed when the winner challenged and was under hard drive at end to stall off BOUNDER. Latter, a forward contender from the break, lost ground at top of home stretch, where he was carried wide.

FOURTH RACE—Seven furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, same. Went to post at 4:04. Off at 4:06. Winner, C. K. Finch's ch. s. BIRD OF PREY, breaking rapidly, moved up and joined SHASTA LOVER in run down the back stretch, shook latter off rounding far turn, where he opened up a long lead. McKechnie kept looking back all last furlong. FAIR BILLOWS held others safe in final stages. LAFTAR wore down the tiring TANTALIZING. Latter broke very slow and appeared to be laboring all the way. He hung when put to punishment in stretch run.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $2,000 added. New Year's Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, easily. Went to post at 4:31. Off at 4:33. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ARRAS, $5.60, $2.80, out; CALF ROPER, $3.00, out; RIP VAN WINKLE, out.

ARRAS was rated off the pace for the first half mile, where he moved up and joined BAY ANGON. Mills nursed him along and he had something in reserve when CALF ROPER challenged rounding the far turn, outgamed latter in final drive and was increasing his advantage at end. CALF ROPER, outrun in early stages, made a determined effort rounding turn into home stretch, but the leader always held him safe. RIP VAN WINKLE never was with his ears pinned back and appeared unable to untrack himself. BAY ANGON was made lot of use of and quit when put to a drive.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-quarter miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, easily. Went to post at 5:00. Off at 5:03. Winner, R. F. Coppage's gr. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BOZO, $4.00, $2.70, $2.40; NOSEGAY, $10.70, $4.30; FRANCES ST. L., $3.20.

BOZO broke from the extreme outside and was sent to the front with a rush in run to first turn. He was rated in front to the top of home stretch, and had enough in reserve to stall off NOSEGAY in final drive. Latter moved up with a determined challenge rounding first turn, but hung after getting to the leader. FRANCES ST. L. tiring badly last furlong, was driving to the limit to stand off CABILDO. Latter was permitted to drop out of it first quarter, worked his passage up on the outside and made very wide turn entering home stretch. He was better than chart shows.

SEVENTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving out; place, easily. Went to post at 5:31. Off at 5:32½. Winner, W. C. Weant's ch. g. (5), by Cherokee—Virginia W. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $750; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 1:42.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—COADY, $4.40, $2.50, $2.10; SAND FIDDLER, $2.80, $2.40; CHANCELLOR, $2.20.

COADY, well ridden, was rated in front under restraint for six furlongs, was allowed to draw clear entering stretch, but was ridden out when SAND FIDDLER challenged. Latter, in trouble going to first turn, moved up to contending position in back stretch and finished strongly. CHANCELLOR showed good speed for six furlongs, had little contention for third position. DRESS SHIP showed flash of early speed.

(Reg. U. S. Patent Office)
—Jefferson Park Selections—
By J. B. SNODGRASS

JEFFERSON PARK, New Orleans, La., Jan. 1.—Featured by the Culver Military Purse, Jefferson Park offers seven claiming races today, with a substitute field, if any of the races are canceled. As the track is good, a rarity at the New Orleans track at this season, there is little probability of using the substitute entries.

CHIMNEY SWEEP appears to stand out in the feature on Maryland form and as the distance is six furlongs he should lead all the way. ELIZABETH BOLLA, which has been consistent on the winter tracks this season, will be the contender. IRONSIDES, if he should run to best form, which he has failed to do so far, would be dangerous. WISE SELLER, winner in Maryland and at this track, just turned to three years of age, has much speed, but the older horses should trim him.

FIRST RACE—NELL KOHLMAN has the edge on the field of 20. She won recently over a similar layout. NOAH'S PRIDE will step along fast, and should be second. POLYP, best in the mud, may get in the money on a good track.

SECOND RACE—OVERBOARD has the best of it, outclassing his field. PERFECT ALIBI should hold the others safe. Very consistent plater and he may wake up. HAROLD ORMONT is third choice.

THIRD RACE—COLONEL CAMPUS won a race the other day in as strong company as he finds here. DRYDOCK and TROLL will be lively contenders. DRYDOCK may be the favorite and has light weight.

FOURTH RACE—MAKE BELIEVE seems to be in the right spot in the mile and one-sixteenth and is not burdened with weight. SUN FRIAR is the one to fear. TRICE is a shifty plater and should be no worse than third. The horses mentioned raced well in Maryland and are keeping it up.

SIXTH RACE—CALWICK, if in top form, should prance in this six furlongs. LOOP has been coming close and finally won out, and should be the contender, with the trifle of 105 pounds. ELIZABETH SULLIVAN won her last start and should figure prominently in this race.

SEVENTH RACE—CLOWNISH should win again in this curtain event. He beat better horses than he meets in distance races. HAZEL DENISON is improving and won at the meeting at long odds. She should come back with a good race. ERIN GO BRAGH is in the best form this winter he has shown for years.

SUBSTITUTE RACE—PRINCE ASCOT will have TULANE LASS to conquer, if this field should be substituted. MAYETTA is a show possibility.

WOTAN WINS NEW YEAR'S HANDICAP

Former Plater Beats Nyack by Three-Length Margin.

JEFFERSON PARK, New Orleans, Jan. 1 (A.P.).—Wotan, the reformed plater, won his second important race of the season as he carried the silks of Ed Haughton to victory in the $3,000 New Year's Handicap today. He also won the Thanksgiving Handicap on the opening day of the meeting. In between he won one race and finished third in another.

Carrying the high weight of 116 pounds, Wotan trailed the pace setters to the top of the stretch and at the finish of the 1 1-16 mile jaunt was three lengths in front of Frank Seremba's Nyack. Third went to R. C. Thatcher's Gallardia, winner of his last two starts.

Gallaudet Five Plays Columbus U. Tonight

In the first collegiate basket ball game of the Capital area in the new year, Gallaudet College's quintet meets Columbus University's five tonight beginning at 8 o'clock in Takoma-Silver Spring High School gymnasium.

On the basis of their games with the same opponent, Shenandoah College, played two weeks ago, tonight's rivals seem about equally matched. Shenandoah defeated both, downing Gallaudet, 64 to 37, and Columbus, 52 to 18.

INCENDIARY THREATS TOLD AT MINE TRIAL

Mount Sterling, Ky., Jan. 1 (A.P.).—Testimony of incendiary speeches, urging miners to "get rid of Jim Daniels and his gun thugs," was offered in evidence here today at the murder conspiracy trial of William H. Hightower.

"We'll win out even if we have to wade in blood up to our necks," was a statement attributed to the union president by Miller Sergeant, a miner testifying for the State.

Butler Sanders, who said he had been a member of the union, quoted Hightower as saying, "We won't have those Black Mountain gun thugs to contend with much longer."

Hightower Follows Testimony.

Hightower, 77-year-old miner, who followed closely the testimony with his wife and children by his side, is being tried in connection with the slaying of Deputy Sheriff Jim Daniels, chief guard at the Black Mountain Mine.

The death of Daniels and three other men in a clash at Evarts last May between three automobile loads of deputies and a score or more of miners, climaxed the strike disorders and brought troops into the coal fields.

Testimony attributing incendiary statements to Hightower and to William B. Jones, union secretary, already sentenced to life imprisonment and awaiting filing of an appeal, was offered during the day. The Commonwealth also brought witnesses who testified that other miners, now indicted and awaiting trial, were sitting in armed groups on the roadside at Evarts shortly before the clash. This evidence was designed to prove a conspiracy existed.

Threatening Letter Shown.

A threatening letter warning them not to testify in the Hightower trial was exhibited in the courtroom today by John and Hugh Lester. The brothers said it had been thrown on the back porch of their home. They are under conspiracy indictments, but testified for the Commonwealth in the Jones trial.

Floyd Lewis, who said he had been a union member, testified that at a union meeting on the eve of the fight Hightower made incendiary remarks, and that a collection was taken up to get guns. Lewis said the miners were going to send somewhere in Tennessee and get the guns.

In vigorous cross-examination former U. S. Senator John M. Robsion got Sergeant to say he did not know who presided at the union meeting, and he also got Sanders tangled up as to some details of the union meeting and part of his testimony was excluded.

ADDED POWERS GIVEN UTILITIES COMMISSION

Senator John J. Blaine (Republican), Wisconsin, whose investigation of security sales in the Capital brought to light cases of misrepresentation and fraud, is drafting a new "blue sky" bill for the District. If enacted into law, the measure will prevent sale of worthless securities not only in the District, but wherever security issues originating here find a market.

Changed only slightly from a bill to regulate stock sales which passed the short session of the Senate, the measure will be ready for introduction in its revised form in a few days, he announced.

Senator Blaine, whose insurance and banking subcommittee of the House District committee last year looked below the surface of the real estate, mortgage and stock situation here, already has introduced two measures to regulate release of deeds of trust and foreclosure of mortgages in the District.

Would Register Securities.

These measures, together with the stock regulatory bill he is revising, passed the Senate but never came to a vote in the House. Prompted by the Brookhart resolution, designed originally to inquire into practices of the F. H. Smith Co., the investigation assumed a character so broad as to cover much of the local investment banking and real estate field.

The "blue sky" bill which Senator Blaine will introduce, provides not only for licensing local security dealers and salesmen, but also for investigation of securities to be offered, before they are actually sold to the public.

Under its terms, registration both of dealers and of the securities they sell, must be made with the Public Utilities Commission, in which administration of the act would be vested.

The commission would be empowered to require submission of detailed information as to values, earnings, assets and liabilities back of the securities before they were put on the market. It could refuse or revoke registration, thus blocking sale of the stock.

Only minor changes are contemplated by Senator Blaine, who may alter provisions for licensing salesmen.

Securities Draft Followed.

His report, made early last year, disclosed that in the past seven years there have been issued in the District approximately $100,000,000 of "so-called securities," largely consisting of mortgage bonds or notes, "a very considerable portion of which are of very dubious value and in some cases utterly worthless."

He told the Senate:

"In many instances investors were induced to exchange hard-earned savings of a lifetime for 'securities' which were not worth the paper on which they were engraved or printed."

The "blue sky" bill Senator Blaine is now revising is substantially the same as the uniform sale of securities act, drafted by the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws. A few changes and modifications have been made to conform with conditions in the District.

It is similar to laws in effect in approximately 20 States, including Kentucky, Kansas, Michigan, Utah, Virginia, California, Illinois, Alabama, Indiana, Massachusetts, Vermont, West Virginia, Arkansas, Iowa and Ohio.

The two real estate bills Senator Blaine already has introduced, and two similar measures put forward by Senator King (Democrat), Utah, gained fresh support yesterday from Senator Thomas P. Gore (Democrat), Oklahoma, new member of the Senate District committee. Senator Gore said he intends to press for action to regulate real estate practices here.

Grocery Store's Safe Balks Robbers' Efforts

The safe in a grocery store at 927 Four-and-a-half street southwest, was badly used by burglars early yesterday morning, but stood against their assaults. The robbers got away with a quantity of canned goods and cigarettes, however, the manager reported to police.

The combination and hinges were knocked from the safe, but the yeggmen failed to get to the valuables inside. They are believed to have been frightened away before they could get the safe open. Entrance was gained by forcing a side window.

When Washington Was Younger—No. 152

ONE of the most spectacular fires Washington ever had was the fire of September 29, 1897, when the Capital Traction power house, then standing on the site of what is now the District Building, was completely destroyed in one hour with a loss in excess of $1,000,000. The picture on the left shows the crowds that gazed at the ruins the morning after the fire. In the background can be seen The Washington Post Building, Shoomaker's famous old saloon, Hotel Lawrence and the old National Theater. The present National Theater was remodeled from the old one. The picture on the right shows the remains of the power house. This plant occupied the entire block that the District Building now occupies and an idea of the conflagration made may be had when it is realized that the entire building was completely destroyed in one hour.

AMATEUR AVIATORS TO ARRIVE MONDAY

40 Private Planes, Bound for Miami, Will Pass Night at Capital.

Forty private planes flown by men and women members of the United States Amateur Air Pilots Association and of the national chain of Aviation Country Clubs and bearing approximately an equal number of guests, are to take off from the Long Island Aviation Country Club's Hicksville flying field at 9:30 o'clock Monday morning on a 1,200-mile sport cruise to Miami, Fla.

At each mid-day and overnight stopping place on their four-day route the fliers are to be guests at social functions arranged in their honor and at Miami, beginning Thursday, they are to compete in amateur events at the National Air Races. Monday night they will stop in Washington; Tuesday night, in Pinehurst, N. C.; and Wednesday night, at St. Simon's Island near Savannah, Ga.

Participation in the cruise, the second of a series of strictly amateur aerial events put on by the association since its recent organization, has been confined to its members and those of the affiliated Aviation Country Clubs. So strictly has the amateur qualification been applied, that Col. Clarence D. Chamberlin, Charles S. ("Casey") Jones and other well-known professional airmen, barred from flying as members of the cruise, are going along as cruise guests, Chamberlin as pilot of a Lockheed and Jones as passenger in another plane.

Burglars Enter Home And Take $52 Loot

Burglars yesterday entered the home of Bernard Rasser, of 1151 New Jersey avenue northwest, and escaped with $40 in cash, a $2.50 gold piece and a bracelet valued at $10. A strong box in which the valuables were locked was smashed, police were told.

Mr. Rasser said entrance was gained through the front door. The place was ransacked and the strong box discovered in a dresser drawer. It was taken to a rear room and smashed.

"Pistol Pete" Held In Killer Mystery

Washington police last night held Joe Truitt, alias "Pistol Pete," former employe of the Ajax United Shows, in connection with the slaying, November 28, of Guilford (Kid) Brown, fellow show employe, in Raleigh, N. C. Truitt was picked up by headquarters detectives on a fugitive warrant sent here by Chief of Police Clarence Barbour.

Brown's body was found near the Raleigh fair grounds after the show had left the North Carolina city. The man had been dead about a week. Chief Barbour said Elaine Lang, sweetheart of Brown, gave information leading to the arrest of Truitt, with whom she came to Washington after Brown disappeared. Truit was arrested at 510 Maine avenue southwest on her information, police said.

Evangelistic Campaign Will Aid Unemployed

A 90-day colored evangelistic campaign will be opened tomorrow at the Cosmopolitan Baptist Church at Tenth and U streets northwest. Dr. Dewitt Perryman, of Chicago, will be among the preachers at the services which will be held at 11 a. m. and 8 p. m.

Alarm Foils Robbers At Henderson Castle

A second attempt was made to rob the famous Henderson Castle, at 2200 Sixteenth street northwest, early yesterday morning just after the New Year was ushered in. The attempt to make away with valuables stored in the castle was foiled by an intricate alarm system.

Willard Reynolds, caretaker, heard the alarm sound at 2:15 a. m. He made a hurried tour of the building, but found no one. However, he discovered that a rear window had been jimmied open. The burglars had evidently been frightened away by the alarm.

The attempt at burglary last night is the second since the death of Mrs. Mary B. Henderson. The other was reported about two months ago.

TED SHAWN APPEARS IN CONCERT TUESDAY

Third Series of Programs Slated by Community Institute.

The Community Institute of Washington, which now has two brief courses under way, one a music series which still includes two events, Sylvia Lent, Washington violinist; and John Erskine, who will speak on "Music in Our Daily Lives," and a literature series, which also still has Stoddard King, American humorist, in "Listen to the Mocking Bird"; and Clara Clemens, in "Reminiscences of My Father, Mark Twain," to offer to its patrons here, will open a third distinct course, one of varied interest, Tuesday evening at 8:15 o'clock, at Central High Community Center, when Ted Shawn and his dance group will be seen in a dance concert.

This third series will include also the "supreme adventurer," Ellery Walter, on February 16; Henry Adams Gibbons, in "A Review of This Ever-Changing World," on March 1; and Albert Leonard Squier, with his panoramic pictures, "Where Rolls the Oregon," on March 29.

Ted Shawn has achieved distinction in the field of spectacular stage production of dances, and as a traveler and lecturer. Recently he has been heard in lectures at the Roerich Museum, New York City; at Amherst College, Smith College, and Mount Holyoke.

Four American dances, danced by Shawn, to a fiddler's breakdown; a Negro spiritual, a revival hymn, and a patriotic song, were also offered to prove the difference of the usable elements in our folk music. This last group will be included in the Ted Shawn program Tuesday.

NEIGHBORS PROTEST ROADHOUSE OPENING

A petition bearing seven pages of signatures of citizens of Mount Rainier and Brentwood, Md., asking Prince Georges County Commissioners to prevent the reopening of an alleged gambling house on Blandensburg road just over the District line, will be presented Tuesday, it was learned yesterday.

The Women's Christian Temperance Union is understood to have circulated the petition, and it is said to have been signed by many of the officers of the two towns as well as by prominent citizens. It was drawn up when rumors of the reopening of the place were heard. The alleged gambling hall has been closed since September, during which time its alleged operator, James LaFontaine, has been sentenced to jail.

The petition quotes LaFontaine's admission before a Federal court in Baltimore that he was a gambler. It asks the commissioners to refuse a license to the "Maryland Athletic Club" or any other organization which might seek to use the house and grounds.

Since LaFontaine's sentence on December 4, it has not been known whether the place would reopen. Lately, however, there have been rumors that those who operated it before have formed their own organization and would run the house again. If rumors that the place was financed from a Middle Western city are true, it may be that this group has made arrangement for continued operation, it is said.

LaFontaine today will begin to serve a nine-month jail sentence handed down on an income tax charge. He has been at liberty on bond of $10,000 to put his business affairs in order and pass the holidays with his family. He pleaded guilty to evading a tax of $11,000 in 1926. A similar charge for 1925 was not pressed after he paid $206,000 in back taxes.

The current petition is the first determined objection to the place by its neighbors. Previously it had been said there was no feeling against it in the immediate vicinity because of the orderly way it was operated. Fear that the new operators may no be so careful also is said to be a motive behind the petition.

14-Year-Old Injury Sends Man to Hospital

A thumb smashed fourteen years ago when he was opening a keg of beer sent Philip Gotlieb, 60 years old, of 5510 Wisconsin avenue northwest, to the hospital last night.

The thumb never entirely healed after it was injured, Mr. Gotlieb told physicians, but had never given him quite as much trouble. It started worrying him considerably about three months ago and last night he had to have it treated. He will come back for treatment again.

Auto Hits Pedestrian As He Crosses Street

Walter Fox, 65 years old, of 2908 Thirteenth street northwest, suffered lacerations about the face and head when struck by an automobile as he crossed Fourteenth street northwest at Irving street.

The driver of the car, Keitt Smith, 25 years old, of 2115 F street northwest, conveyed Fox to Sibley Hospital, where he was treated for his injuries and sent home. No charges were made against Smith.

DISTRICT PREPARED TO ENFORCE ORDER FOR TAXI METERS

Utility Board Plans Putting Rule in Effect January 10, Despite Appeals.

ALSO FIRM REGARDING ELECTRIC RATE HEARING

Despite appeals pending in District Supreme Court, the Public Utilities Commission is preparing to enforce its order requiring all taxicabs in Washington to carry meters, and to hold a hearing on proposed reduction of rates of the Potomac Electric Power Company to the consumer.

Both cases are scheduled for hearing in court early next week, and decisions probably will be announced shortly afterward because of the nearness of the effective dates of the orders involved. Unless an injunction prevents, the commission will enforce its taxicab order, Sunday, January 10. The electric rate is to be held January 21 as previously planned.

Most of the taxicab operators are understood to be ready to install meters at once despite the appeals of the City and Bell Cab companies. Most of the operators of the Diamond and the Black and White and Yellow companies, in fact, had meters in storage when the commission order was issued.

Agents Already Here.

Many meter agencies had representatives in the city during the last few weeks, and it is understood most of the independent operators either have bought meters or contracted for them. Very few of the more than 5,000 cabs in operation are expected to be withdrawn because of the order.

About the only operators who probably will decline the expense are those who have been running cabs on a part-time basis, such as Federal employes who drive their cars for hire during rush periods and sometimes at nights and on Sundays.

A compromise move is expected from officials of the Potomac Electric Power Co. within the next few days or before Tuesday, when a hearing on its appeal is scheduled in District Supreme Court. There were indications in previous court arguments that the company may submit a schedule of reduced rates for 1932, based on the consent decree, before the January 21 hearing, in an effort to prevent establishment of rates on the basis of the new sliding scale adopted last spring by the utilities body.

Under this sliding scale, which is the basis of the power company's appeal, the consent decree is discarded, and the 1932 consumer rates may be brought as low as 3.5 or 3.8 cents per kilowatt hour. The new sliding scale allocates a much greater part of the excess profits to rate of reduction and cuts the original rate of return allowed the company from 7½ to 7 per cent.

Object of the Hearing.

The District Supreme Court already has held that the commission is not bound by the 7-year-old consent decree and that it has the authority to establish new electric rates without reference to it. The pending hearing is to determine whether the new sliding scale is just.

Word also is expected from the White House shortly after the reconvening of Congress, as to the appointment of a successor to Harleigh H. Hartman, who resigned last month as a member of the commission. Although several candidates have been put forward, the President is understood to be inclined to name People's Counsel Richmond B. Keech to the position. While Mr. Keech has not sought the post, he is known to be receptive should President Hoover see fit to make the appointment.

Year Brings Loss Of $1,500 Bracelet

During the first five minutes of the new year, Mrs. Lillian Voegtlin, of 2525 Belmont road northwest, was either robbed of or lost a $1,500 platinum bracelet set with 40 diamonds as she attended a party in the Chevy Chase Club.

Mrs. Voegtlin told police of Montgomery County and local authorities that she remembered positively the bracelet being on her wrist just before midnight. At five minutes past 12, she noted its disappearance. Late yesterday club employes were still searching for the bracelet.

Mrs. Voegtlin said she was in the main ballroom of the club among a group of New Year Eve merrymakers when she missed the ornament.

Attack on Schoolboy Shrouded in Mystery

Youth, 15, Found Trussed in Rock Creek Park, Says He'll Get Own Revenge; Police are Puzzled by Case.

"I'll take care of it myself, and you'll hear about it later on," was the reply given to police investigators yesterday by the 15-year-old McKinley High School boy from his cot at Garfield Hospital, who was found bound and gagged in Rock Creek Park at 6 o'clock yesterday morning.

Police of the Tenth Precinct received a phone call last night that might clear up the mysterious elements in the high school boy's story. A person who preferred to keep his name out of record told investigators that the boy in past instances had told stories of a nature similar to his tale to police yesterday.

Bromslow "Barney" Golkoski, 24 Todd place northeast, was discovered in the park by Fred E. Altemus, 2941 Twenty-eighth street, when he drove through the park accompanied by his wife. Stifled groans led Altemus to the spot, about twenty feet from Beach drive, between Pierce Mill road and Blagden avenue, where he saw the boy stretched out, with a heavy downpour of rain beating on his body.

Altemus ran to the boy and removed a handkerchief gag; heavy tire tape bonds around the youngster's feet proved too strong to break and he lifted the unconscious form to the car and drove to the Tenth Police Precinct Station, where the bonds were cut and police took Golkoski to the hospital.

The boy was treated for shock and exposure at the hospital. He is to be kept there until all danger of pneumonia has past. He regained consciousness soon after arrival but he says he is too dazed to know what happened after 11 o'clock New Year's Eve.

Policeman J. H. Johnson went to the boy's home and notified his mother, Mrs. Antonina Golkoski, who immediately went to the hospital. The boy told her how he spent the hours leading to an unconscious daze and to be later discovered in the park, about 5 miles from the downtown area, where he had gone to celebrate the new year.

He said: "The last thing I can remember is standing in front of a restaurant at Ninth and E streets about 11 o'clock last night. I had gone out with a friend of the family to celebrate New Year's Eve. I had promised to be home at 11, however, and after we had a bite to eat we separated.

"I got on a street car, but had ridden only a few blocks when I remembered I wanted to see somebody. I can't recall now who it was. I do remember, though, that I got off of the car, walked back to the restaurant and stood on the corner. All of a sudden somebody stuffed some tobacco into my mouth and I don't know what happened after that."

At the time he complained of a headache and said that he would try to remember more of his adventure, but in all subsequent interrogation he failed to give further information.

Physicians said that there were no marks of violence on the boy's head or body, and that there was no sign of any drug used to render him unconscious. He denied when questioned by police that he had had anything to drink.

Policemen S. B. Stanley and J. H. Johnson, of the Tenth Precinct, and headquarters detectives are investigating the boy's story. The friend of the family with whom the boy spent the evening is said to live in the 800 block of Tenth street and efforts are being made to locate him.

Golkoski is the oldest of four children, who all live with their widowed mother and are being taken care of by the Welfare Board, according to Policeman J. H. Johnson. Their father, who was a tailor, died about six years ago.

Y. W. C. A. PLANNING FEATURES FOR 1932

The new year opens at the Young Women's Christian Association with a series of new features for children and adults inaugurated in the health education department, of which Miss Irene Richards is director, assisted by a staff of athletic and recreational experts, including Misses Lois Balcom, Elizabeth Hastings, Elsie L. Huntley, Jenny Hurnbull, and Dr. Grace G. Purse, who is the association's physician in charge of physical examination.

A slogan especially for January, characterized as "life's darkest month," has been adopted by the health education committee of the Y. W. C. A., of which Mrs. Wilson Compton is chairman, which advises business women who are at their desks throughout most of their lives, to "Get sunshine at the Y. W. C. A.," in the big solarium, where the ultra-violet ray treatments are proving more and more popular this winter than ever before.

Of the indoor games at the Y. W., in which both men and women participate, badminton is proving so popular that additional groups playing this game regularly are constantly being organized for both daytime and evening practice.

A social dancing class for boys and girls under the direction of Mrs. E. G. Nourse, a member of the health education committee, is being organized to take place each Saturday morning from 11 to 12 o'clock, with Miss Elizabeth Hastings as instructor, and this juvenile group of children between the ages of 8 and 12 years will follow their dancing class with swimming in the big pool.

The group, already including more than 30 boys and girls, is meeting this morning for the first time, and it will later be known as the Fifty-Fifty Dancing Club, because of the fact that an equal number of boys and girls will patricipate in the lessons.

Mrs. Nourse, who is chairman of the committee which has organized this new group, is assisted in the direction of its activities by Mrs. Albert Attwood, Mrs. Joel Boone and Mrs. Wilson Compton, all of whom are members of the health educaion committee of the Young Women's Christian Association.

The man mashed his thumb several days ago and when infection set in, he was brought to the Washington hospital. Physicians failed in their efforts to ward off blood poisoning and save his life.

JEWISH FUND GROUP TO MEET TOMORROW

Senator King, Representative Bloom and Dr. Simon will be the principal speakers at the mass-meeting to be held by the Jewish student loan fund tomorrow at 2:30 p. m., at the Jewish Community Center, Sixteenth and Q streets.

The Jewish Student Loan Fund is composed of representatives of all the leading Jewish fraternities, sororities and clubs of Washington and has as its objective the establishment of a general fund from which loans will be made to Jewish students who are in need of financial aid to complete their college course. Joseph Bulman, chairman, Sylvia Mink, Gertrude Elfenbach, Aaron Goldman and Brown Venezky form the executive of the fund, and representatives from the various fraternities and sororities form the general board. This philanthropic movement has received the endorsement of Rabbi Abram Simon, Isaac Gans, Mrs. Charles Goldsmith, Isadore Hershfield and many other outstanding prominent civic and educational leaders.

The first social affair to be sponsored by the fund will be held January 10, in the form of a ball at the Willard Hotel. The ball is to be a subscription dance, the proceeds of which are to be placed in the general fund from which the loans to the Jewish students are to be made. From present information it is indicated that the ball will be the best entertainment ever afforded Washingtonians. The committee has completed plans to offer a great variety of novelties during the course of the evening and it is the plan of the committee to ask the various Jewish actors who will be playing in the theaters of Washington to appear.

The public is invited to the mass-meeting tomorrow.

Antiweapon Move Reported Gaining

Groups of Parent-Teachers Over Nation Rally to Its Support.

Plans for curtailment of violent crimes such as are crowding the pages of newspapers daily, put in motion here by the National Anti-Weapon Association, which is conducting a campaign along educational lines to overcome the too-prevalent tendency to "reach for a gun," are attracting favorable attention and cooperation from parent-teacher organizations throughout the entire Nation, it was stated last night by Mrs. C. deF. Grant, vice president of the association.

State congresses of parents and teachers in more than half the States of the Union already have indorsed the anti-weapon group, which was organized here recently with headquarters in the Investment Building, Mrs. Grant revealed.

These State congresses unanimously are offering every possible aid in the movement, which is directed primarily toward overcoming the commission of violent crimes by children, and toward developing the characters of children so that when they reach maturity they will not be tempted to resort to pistols to achieve their desires.

WEATHER HAMPERS CELEBRATION HERE OF NEW YEAR'S DAY

MANY ORGANIZATIONS ALSO HAVE GATHERINGS

Work Started on Transfer of Commerce Department to New Building.

The northwestern wind and rain storm that ushered the New Year into the Capital continued yesterday, making the first day of 1932 a dark and somber one, and hampering considerably the holiday plans of thousands of Government workers.

As a result of the inclement weather observances of the holiday were confined almost entirely to the homes where receptions were held and people gathered to wish one another good luck, good cheer and prosperity in the coming year, and to reminisce a little about the twelve months just past.

Official Washington turned out for the usual series of governmental receptions, with the President, members of the Cabinet and others high in State and diplomatic life at home to one another and to the general public.

Commerce Transfer Starts.

And while many of the Government workers making their calls complained rather bitterly that they had to go back to work today and were deprived of a four-day recess, others in private life worked yesterday and today without interruption as they did following Christmas.

For, with a holiday, all activity does not cease and this was especially true yesterday when other work being done, a moving company started on the task of transporting the equipment belonging to the Department of Commerce from the old building to the new $17,500,000 home in the "Triangle" area.

In addition to the official receptions, various organizations and clubs held receptions yesterday.

"Y" Celebration.

New Year's Day was celebrated jointly by the Young Men's and Young Women's Christian Associations with an all-day program of activity, including receptions for the members and friends of the two organizations.

In addition to the receptions there was a continuous round of sport contests, athletic exhibitions, music and other forms of entertainment at the Y. M. C. A. Building, 1736 G street northwest. In the evening the celebration was transferred to the Y. W. C. A. Building at Seventeenth and K streets northwest, where there was a reception and a first local showing of the sound motion picture, "King of Kings."

Newly elected officers of the Y. M. C. A., headed by Dr. A. C. Christie, president, and Leonard W. DeGast, general secretary, greeted the guests. Refreshments were served by a hostess committee under the chairmanship of Mrs. DeGast. Open house was observed in all departments with special educational and religious work exhibits.

Oldest Inhabitants Meet.

The Association of Oldest Inhabitants of the District met at 10 a. m. and heard the reading of the chronicles for the year 1931 by John Clagett Proctor. Later the group went to the White House, where they greeted the President.

The Central Union Mission kept open house from 2 p. m. to 5 p. m. Several hundred visitors attended the reception and took the opportunity to inspect the mission and its Emergency Home for Children. Superintendent and Mrs. John S. Bennett received the visitors, assisted by the board of directors and the ministerial council. E. H. DeGroot, jr., is president of the board and Dr. Freely Rohrer, pastor of the Metropolitan Presbyterian Church, heads the council.

A party for poor children of the city was held under auspices of the Christian Companionship League of the Volunteers of America at the relief mission, 471 Pennsylvania avenue. The mission also served a hot dinner to jobless men and women.

Bold Robber Gets $600 In Pie Company Holdup

A haul of $600 in cash was obtained by a robber who held up Eugene John Racca, coproprietor of the Crusty Pie Co., 1403 B street southeast, just after he had opened the establishment early yesterday morning for the day's business.

Racca, who lives at 1426 Ames place northeast, said the man entered about 4:30 a. m. and, leveling a pistol at him said:

"Open the safe, John."

Racca said he thought at first that the man was an acquaintance who was joking with him inasmuch as the man called him by his given name. The hold-up victim, however, did not recognize the robber and so opened the safe as directed and handed over the contents of the strong box inside. Several bills from a cash register also were taken by the robber.

The robber ripped the office telephone from its connections, and warning Racca to remain quiet until he had made good his escape, fled. Racca called police from a nearby store. He furnished a detailed description of the robber and police broadcast it immediately.
